We want better car Parks

• America tries slot-meters says A Motor Correspondent

OVER in Oklahoma City they have started kerb-parking meters. These park-o-meters are set at intervals of 20ft. along the kerb. When a motorist drops fifty cents in the slot, a green signal is raised.

After one-hang the signal drops and any passing "cop" can tell at a glance that the car has been ever-parked.

These meters were installed after an official investigation into the parking problem.

It was discovered that 80 per cent. of the valuable parking places in the city was being utilized by car owners as an all-day garage.

At any rate, Oklahoma City does recognize the parking problem and is trying to put matters on a sane basis.

We have our all-day parkers. They trust to luck. Instead of the meter we have a policeman with a notebook. By the law of the land, if you get away before he stops you the policeman has no case. In big cities hundreds of car owners every day play the game of dodging the policeman.

Inadequate Provision

Just as many cars are parked in unauthorised car parks as in official parking places.

This is because the official parking places are totally inadequate. Few authorities are taking the trouble to assist car owners in this matter.

Meanwhile, the problem is becoming worse every day.

Here is the view of the London and Home Counties Traffic Advisory Committee, given in their report, just published, for the year 1934-1935:

"In our view, the provision of garages and parking places off the highway, where vehicles may be parked at reasonably low rates, is a matter of great importance, and the promoters of schemes for their provision deserve every encouragement."

"In accordance with the policy to which reference is made in our last report, we decided not to support a number of proposals for the appointment of public parking places where it appeared that neighbouring garages were able to accommodate the vehicles at reasonably low charges."

Excessive Charges

The experience of London motorists is not only park facilities are poor but garage charges are often excessive.

QUIET CORNER

Green shroud for the pine

THE great pine crashed to earth on a night of storm about seven years ago.

Ever since then its trunk has lain straight along the bank at the foot of the dense thorn tree above which it once towered high.

From its splintered base to its cleanly sawn base it is slowly becoming a part of the green bank on which it lies.

The moss which has crept over the wounds left by the torn bark merges with the young grass now lapping against the sides of the prone trunk.

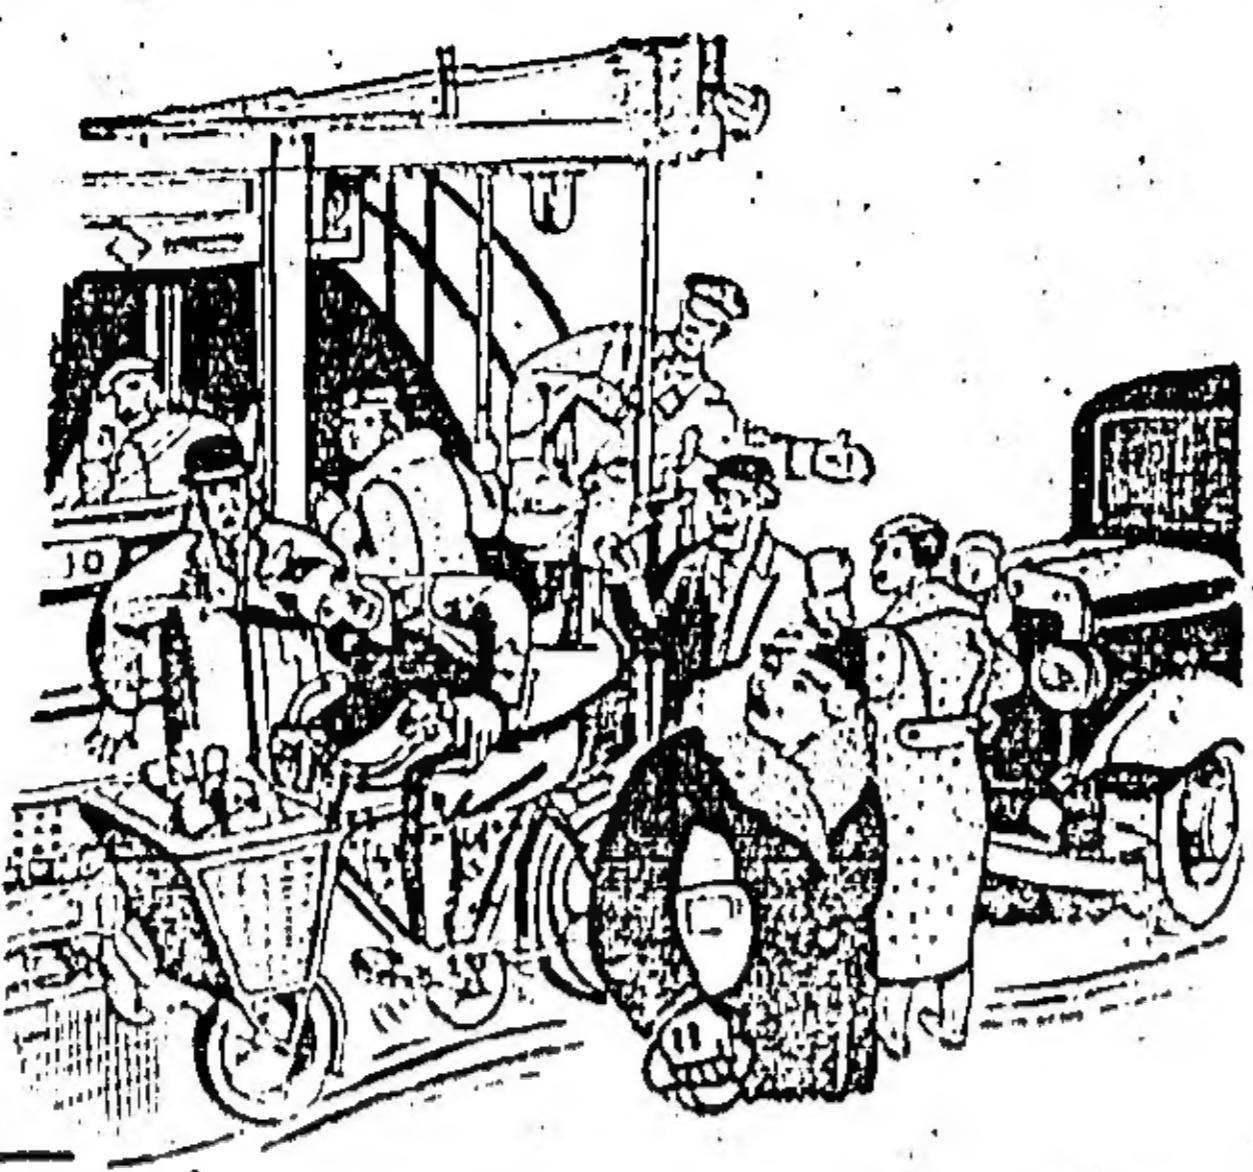

The bare stumps, where the branches were lopped, have turned into little towers of ivy, and there will be nothing visible throughout the summer save a long green ridge when the needles have grown tall enough to hide the last scurried wood from sight.

Fast and Safe

In a book just published, "Speed on Salt," by George Eyston and W. F. Bradley (B. T. Batsford, 20s), they tell you that salt provides the best possible surface. You can get high speed on such a surface, and salt speeds.

Salt is white—the ideal colour for making the most of your lumps.

Salt roads, according to the Ithaca experts, can be built for round about £300 a mile, compared with £300 a mile for an asphalt road.

But salt, of course, may be cheap in these parts. Anyhow, the idea is ingenious, and we want ingenuity in road-building.

We are fortunate in Hongkong regarding non-skid roads for our traffic people and the P.W.D. have always been fully alive to this problem. But there are one or two places in the Castle Peak road that are still danger spots.

KING'S BIRTHDAY
RECEPTIONGOVERNOR AND LADY
CALDECOTT AS HOSTS

Yesterday evening a reception was held at Government House, in place of the Ball which usually marks the King's Birthday. Permission was specially obtained from Home to hold the reception, which was granted despite the fact that full Court mourning does not cease until July.

For the first time, King Edward VIII's royal cipher and crown shone over the facade of Government House, the illuminated sign being visible from the other side of the harbour.

As previously announced, Lady Caldecott, who arrived from England a week ago, had sufficiently recovered from indisposition to receive the guests with His Excellency, the Governor, though she did not undertake the strain of standing up during the whole time that the 2,000 guests filed past.

Thanks to adequate arrangements by the police the immense traffic was dealt with smoothly. A telephone was put up on Murray Parade Ground and guests merely gave the numbers of their cars at the door when leaving.

An excellent programme of music was given by the bands.

The Principal Guests

Among the guests were—His Excellency Major General and Mrs. A. W. Bartholomew, His Honour Sir Atholl and Lady McGregor, His Honour Mr. Justice J. J. and Mrs. Layden, the Very Rev. Father A. Bland, Commodore and Mrs. C. G. Sedgwick, Brigadier and Mrs. H. G. Seth-Smith, Hon. Mr. R. A. C. and Mrs. North, Hon. Mr. C. G. Alabaster, Hon. Mr. W. J. and Mrs. Carrie, Hon. Mr. Edwin and Mrs. Taylor, Miss M. Taylor, Hon. Mr. A. G. W. Tickle, Hon. Sir Shouson Chow and Miss Chow, Hon. Mr. J. J. and Mrs. Patterson, Hon. Mr. W. H. and Mrs. Bell and party, Hon. Commdr. and Mrs. G. F. Holt, Hon. Dr. and Mrs. A. R. Wellington, Hon. Mr. T. H. and Mrs. King, Miss King, Hon. Mr. S. W. and Mrs. T. S. Misses Ts'ao, Hon. Mr. T. N. Chau, Hon. Mr. M. and Mrs. Lo, Hon. Mr. S. H. and Mrs. Dowell, Misses D. A. and Pamela Dowell, Sir William Horrell, Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Sayer, Mr. W. Schiolden, Mr. E. W. Hamilton, Sir Robert and Lady Ho Tung, Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Kotewall, Misses Kotewall, Wine Commander and Mrs. A. G. Bishop, Hon. Mr. A. F. B. and Mrs. Silvana Netto, Hon. Mr. M. T. Johnson.

The Consular Body and members of all sections of the community's social, business and military life attended.

By kind permission of Lt.-Col. A. C. Marsh and Officers, the Band of the 2nd Battalion, the East Lancashire Regiment (Bandmaster A. B. Yule), and by kind permission of Lt.-Col. D. C. Wilson, D.S.O., R.A., and Officers the Pipes of the Hongkong Brigade, H.K.S.R.A. (Pip Major Muir) played the following Major Muhld) provided music in the grounds.

Dance music was played between 10.30 p.m. and 1 a.m. Light refreshments were served on the roof garden and in the grounds, while supper was served from 11.15 p.m. below the ballroom.

CONSULS RECEIVED

In accordance with local tradition, His Excellency the Governor received the Consular Body and their ladies at Government House yesterday at 11.30 a.m. when all foreign representatives in the Colony attended to pay their respects and to drink the health of His Majesty the King.

His Excellency, proposing the toast, said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I believe that in Hongkong alone out of all the King's territories will the first item in the celebration of His Majesty's first birthday on the Throne have been a meeting, exclusive and intimate, between the Consular Body and the Colonial Governor.

"I shall be told, perhaps, that this singularity of ours is only accidental and due to the transference of the military parade from the morning to the afternoon. That is so, but nevertheless I choose to see in our order of ceremony for this first year of His Majesty's reign something not merely accidental but symbolic. I believe that nowhere on earth do people of all nations live together in greater unity and goodwill than here in Hongkong. I believe that in no part of the British Commonwealth could the relations between the Consular Body and the Colonial administration be more firmly rooted in mutual respect, charitableness and fellowship than here in this Colony.

"And so just as the Consular Body

Britain's Death Merchants

Secretary To Cabinet Defends Arms' Men
"BRITISH PUBLIC MISLED"

Sir Maurice Hankey, Secretary of the Cabinet for 20 years and Secretary of Imperial Defence, made a vigorous defence of private armament manufacture in a remarkable statement before the Arms Commission, in London, recently.

Evidence given by Sir Maurice at a previous session resulted in questions being asked in the House of Commons as to whether the Government approved of a Civil Servant placing his views before the Commission. The Opposition gave notice that they would raise the matter later.

Sir Maurice declared that the historical foundation of the private manufacturer of arms was that of sand. Public opinion on this subject had been misled partly by the language of the Covenant of the League of Nations and largely by the propagandist activities of those who brought the charges.

The inclusion of the idea of prohibiting private manufacture and trade in arms in the Covenant was, generally speaking, not summoned by the British delegation to the Peace Conference. They had, however, to meet persistent pressure from President Wilson.

Sir Maurice asked the Commission not to accept the memorandum circulated on behalf of the Admiralty in 1919 in which suppression of private manufacture was dealt with. The evidence he said, showed that the memorandum was not, as had been implied, Admiral Wemyss's considered judgment.

AN ESSENTIAL PART

Other points from Sir Maurice:

"Private manufacture is an essential part of our system of imperial defence.

"I have never heard even of a suggestion of interference by armament firms with delegates or conferences.

"I venture to submit that the case has not been made out sufficiently to justify a prohibition, whether national or international, or any drastic reorganisation of the industry.

Speaking of the activity of Mr. Shearer at the Geneva Disarmament Conference in 1927, Sir Maurice said that it had not in any way effected the result.

"One swallow does not make a summer," he added, "and my personal experience shows that the Shearer episode was unexampled."

Sir Maurice said that since his previous evidence he had received letters thanking him as a person in a detailed position for having done something to remove stigma. One letter was from the widow of a great manufacturer of armaments who had been "terribly hurt."

Sir Maurice said that the case against private manufacture had been built up on the basis of certain alleged episodes often misrepresented.

It was regrettable that much of the evidence, though in a locker key that some other attempts to smother the private manufacturers by referring to them by such terms as "merchants of death," the "bloody traffic," and "war traders," had continued the process of creating pre-judice.

"The use of the language of hyperbole in this matter," he went on, "must tend to mislead a public that has had neither the time nor the material to study the matters completely. In some statements, not the slightest regard has been paid by most of the witnesses in the published views of the Government."

EXTRAVAGANT LANGUAGE

The suggestion that the manufacture of arms was a business on a low moral plane was unjustified.

"The extravagant language we have heard is inappropriate and unbecoming for us to go on. This poisoning of the atmosphere increases the difficulties of those who wish to present an impartial view."

Sir Maurice criticised attempts at distortion for propaganda and complained that episodes were separated from their context and a searchlight thrown on the alleged misdeeds of private manufacturers, misdeeds usually improved on and sometimes wholly inaccurate.

One side of the case had been misrepresented and grossly exaggerated. The other had hardly been heard at all.

Sir Maurice said he thought the existence of private manufacture of arms was a negligible factor in the origin of the Great War.

UNWORTHY SUGGESTION

Referring to the alleged incompatibility of public duty and private interests, Sir Maurice said, "This unworthy suggestion that individuals cannot separate their private interests from their public duty, citizens deeply into civilised society, doctors, chemists, and nurses depend for their profit on ill-health or disease. It would be outrageous to suggest that for that reason they try and encourage epidemic disease or are lukewarm in the promotion of public health."

No one suggested, he said, that undertakers tried to increase the death-rate.

Sir Maurice spoke of the "atmosphere of nasty insinuation" about the imputation that Cabinet Ministers and other influential people owned shares in firms manufacturing armaments, and that they would be inclined to discourage disarmament.

"It is difficult to imagine how such outrageous insinuations can be seriously made," he said.

Regarding allegations of war profits, Sir Maurice asked, "Why should the temptation for profit be greater in the case of the manufacturers of armaments than in that of the doctors, the chemists, the chemical manufacturers, the undertakers, crematoria proprietors, the cemeteries, and the lawyers?"

"Let anyone hearing this evidence think of his own friends who have profited out of war," he added, "and they will probably include persons interested not only in the only stages of arm manufacture but people concerned in banking, shipping, insurance, and a vast range of other commodities essential both to civilised life and the maintenance of our forces."

THE MULLINER EPISODE

Speaking of "the hard worked Mulliner episode," Sir Maurice said that one would be inclined to blame Mr. Mulliner for bringing information to the Government mainly as to the increase in Germany's capacity to manufacture guns, &c. Any patriotic citizen surely had that duty and, being a representative of an armaments firm did not exempt Mr. Mulliner.

Allegations had been made, went on Sir Maurice, that armaments firms had tried to influence public opinion through the control of newspapers in their own and other countries. Unfortunately, bribery of the foreign Press by Governments was by no means a thing of the past, but no case existed against the British manufacturer, although the weapon of the Press had been resorted to by their opponents.

BAD FOR NATIONAL PRESTIGE

Pointing out how widespread was the propaganda against the private manufacture of arms, Sir Maurice handed up a book which he said was printed for use in schools in one of the Dominions. "I would rather not mention which Dominion," remarked Sir Maurice.

Sir Maurice contended that it was prejudicial to the national interest to bring out at the industry. It was bad for the morale of the industry, bad for national prestige, and bad for Imperial defence. He hoped that the Commission would express its opinion of the extravagance of the propaganda against the industry.

"I suggest that if the private manufacture of arms is alleged to be one of the causes of war, it is an example of the lack of balance and perspective shown in much of the evidence," he said.

Sir Maurice said that he had never had a share in a private armaments firm in his life.

Negro Ex-Convict Found Hanged In Homebound Liner

Liverpool, June 15. John McAuley, a negro, released from Walton Jail, Liverpool, a few days ago, and put aboard the liner Athosso, bound for West Africa, has been found hanging in the ship.

McAuley, who was fifty, appeared in a Liverpool court case two years ago as the head of an establishment known as the "house of terror" in the foreign quarter of the city.

He was sentenced to three years' penal servitude at Manchester Assizes in March 1934 on charges of procuration and unlawful wounding. His wife, Mary McAuley, aged forty-five, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude. The judge also recommended that McAuley should be sent back to Sierra Leone, where he was born.

Twilight Of Britain's Cavalry

ARMY'S FAREWELL TO ITS STEEDS

London, June 12. THOUGH this year's

Royal Tournament at Olympia was not the Army's farewell to its steeds, it was one of the proudest of the defiance remaining to the military horse age.

For the machine is taking charge, and the Army is rapidly exchanging saddles for petrol engines.

It is appropriate, therefore, that the tournament should assemble the pageantry of the brave, romantic days, the strange excitement of jingling harness and thundering hooves, of glamour of the cavalcade.

HEROLDIC PAGEANT

The tournament which ended on May 23, was as usual, a picture of all the services.

The programme included brilliant spectacles like the heraldic pageant of Norfolk and feats displaying the skill, modern activities, and physical fitness of Navy, Army, and Air Force.

But a special sentiment attached to the excellent displays of horsemanship which were arranged, for the twilight of the horse era, in the military sense, approaches, and in future years it may be difficult to amass quite so varied talent and quite so many thrills.

Within a short time ten cavalry regiments and the Royal Horse Artillery will be on a mechanised basis, and half of the regiments which retain horses will be in India.

BRAVE SALUTE

Choice for programmes will then be more restricted. Still, this year, the horse age made a brave salute.

Famous riders and their mounts were to be seen in large numbers. Some 250 horses took part.

The Royal Horse Artillery musical drive was a farewell to these thrilling spectacles for the branch at home is in process of being mechanised. The "Sphinx" Battery, which gives the drive, goes to India next winter. The musical drives have been carried out for 60 years.

The Royal Navy gave a demonstration in the use of ropes aloft, and the Royal Marines gave a display which illustrates sport and training.

The 2nd Battalion of the Royal Norfolk Regiment staged an historical review, harking back to the patriots of its county in the days of the Armada menace.

There were great and brilliant scenes, in which cavalry took part.

The King is the Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Norfolk Regiment.

TWO SECONDS TO LIVE

THOUGHTS OF AIRMAN WHO JUST RIGHTEOUS MACHINE

London, May 28. THIS is a story of one and a half seconds; of how it feels to be certain one is about to die.

A few experts stood on a flying field near London and watched a test pilot trying out a new machine 5,000 feet above. They heard the crescendo roar of the engine as the nose dropped and the aeroplane started a power dive.

They watched the speed increasing until, at 250 m.p.h. the pilot began easing her out of the fall.

THEY GASPED

And they gasped when, as the aeroplane levelled off one wing went down and the machine fell into a vertical side slip, out of control. Each of them knew what the pilot was doing up there, struggling with his controls to master the falling craft. Each of them knew how slim his chances of surviving were.

Down the plane hurtled until, 100 feet from the ground, it came out of the fall and landed perfectly. "Superb airmanship," some one said.

Afterwards the test pilot spoke of his thoughts up there as he was falling to what he thought his death. This is what he said:

"As I came out of the dive the ailerons jammed. Down went one wing, and down we went. I did everything I knew to right her, but it seemed useless.

"I looked at the altitude meter. The needle was moving quickly over the dial, ticking off the little marks that meant the feet between the earth and me.

I WONDERED

"Time seemed to stop. You're for it, boy," I said. "You're going to hit the deck. You haven't a chance."

"I wondered how it would feel; whether we'd burst into flames.

"All the time one part of my mind was thinking, hurried thoughts, I suppose, but they seemed slow and deliberate to me. And at the same time I was fighting to regain some sort of control. The ailerons wouldn't move. I couldn't get her out.

"Somewhere down there I could see people watching. I wondered whether my wife was watching too. I hoped she wasn't. Then it struck me that I wouldn't be able to fly the man I had an appointment with at six o'clock.

"Then I thought that if I could get the wing up just a little I might hit with that. Then, the crash wouldn't be so bad. I might get away with broken legs. The ground was very close then. I had one last effort.

"I tried to get her out by using the rudder. I worked. Slowly she came out. I landed. My wife wasn't there. I could take that man up at six.

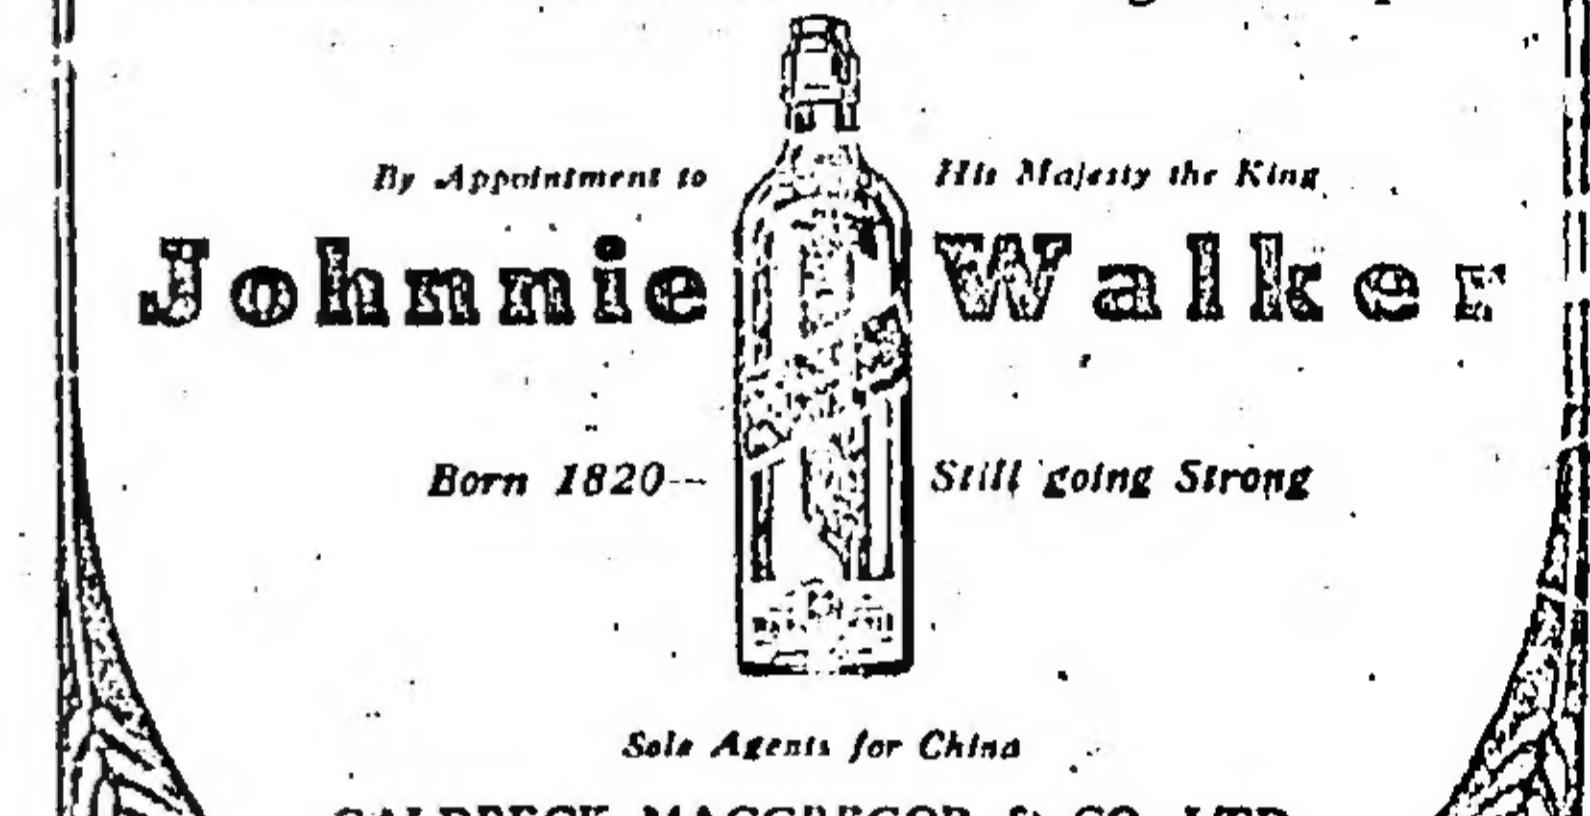

"I worked out how long I'd been falling. One and half seconds.

"A man takes that long to fall off a skyscraper."

He said to me: I never call for a whisky—I know better... I said to him: Quite right, call for Johnnie Walker—it's no better... I

Jo its bouquet is the first hint of the special qualities in Johnnie Walker. A promise more than met when you sip this grand whisky. Leisured age and thoughtful blending are the two reasons for the exceptional excellence of Johnnie Walker. It is an excellence the whole world agrees upon.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE MARKET IRREGULAR YESTERDAY

New York, June 23.

Swan, Culbertson & Fritz Dow Jones' summary of yesterday's market:—The market to-day was irregular and trading was on the light side. The advance early in the session brought prices to new high levels since April 15. Later, however, moderate profit-taking was encountered which was accompanied by dullness. Finally, prices recovered from their low levels, with support noted all along the line. Railroad issues, however, were slow in responding to the rally. Motor shares firmed, but price movements were narrow. In the bonds market, utility issues were higher, but Government bonds were irregularly lower. Stocks on the Curb Exchange were irregularly higher.

S.C. & F. New York office cables:

Stocks: The market to-day reflected profit-taking, but the undertones remained strong. Sears Roebuck's sales were up 20 per cent, for the month ended June 18th. The Southern Pacific Company has allotted $8,000,000 in order to purchase 2,050 freight cars, the largest since 1929. The reduction in dynamic prices is expected to affect the third-quarter earnings of the Hercules Powder Company, as 50 per cent. of the total business of this corporation is done by the explosives department.

The Department of Labour reports a contra-seasonal increase in employment and pay-rolls during May. Business failures during the past week totalled 192 as compared with 172 failures the previous week. Demand deposits totalled $14,431,000,000, against $14,677,000,000 the previous week.

Cotton: Sentiment continues bullish, but the tendency is to await reactions or for a Government announcement of further sales of "spot" cotton. To-day's selling was largely due to traders taking their profits.

Wheat: Speculative demand is lighter, but there is no relief in the North-West. Reports of damage to the crops continue and hedges in the winter crop are beginning. The European crops are favourable, with the possible exception of Russia.

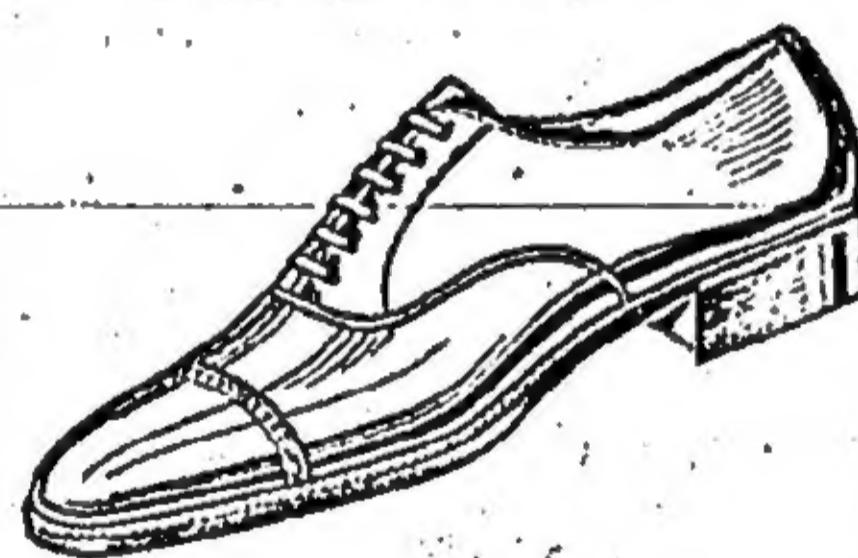

Rubber: Strike talk is subsiding, whilst interest is improving. The consumption of rubber in the United States during the first five months of the year reached the record of 230,334 tons.

KING'S BIRTHDAY
HAPPY VALLEY REVIEW AND MARCH PAST

The Colony of Hongkong yesterday honoured the forty-second birthday of His Majesty King Edward VIII by a display of military splendour and public loyalty almost unequalled in its history of ninety-five years.

It was the particular wish of His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, that the observances should be of a nature befitting the first birthday celebration of the Monarch since he succeeded six months ago, and the large holiday crowds and members of military and voluntary services gave their whole-hearted support. Ships in harbour dressed overall and banners fluttered from all buildings.

In the morning, His Excellency received the Consular body and drank the health of His Majesty with them. Special permission had been obtained to hold a reception in the evening and over 2,000 guests thronged Government House to be received by His Excellency and Lady Caldecott, who braved a slight indisposition to take her share in the celebration.

A salute of 21 guns was fired by the Mountain Battery, H.K.S.R.A., at noon yesterday signifying the birthday of the King.

Elaborate arrangements had been made by the military authorities to ensure that the precision and smoothness characteristic of British ceremonial should be strictly adhered to on the occasion of the Review. His Excellency the Governor had in mind some weeks before that he desired the Colony to extend itself on this first birthday of the King Emperor in his royal role.

A happy omen in the eyes of the Chinese was the coincidence of the birthday with their own Dragon Boat Festival, a day for festivity and rejoicing which perhaps kept many of them viewing the parade but sufficiently compensated for that omission by bringing its memory of good fortune.

The police had taken great trouble to arrange the traffic streams with the minimum of inconvenience and had published orders a week ago for the benefit of the motoring public. Drums were thus told to go clockwise round Happy Valley to the entrance gates to avoid congestion. Eastbound traffic was diverted from Queen's Road at Arsenal Street and Gloucester Road was closed to all but pedestrians and troops from 4 to 7 p.m. while the latter made their way to and from the parade ground. Other troops and detachments converged on the Valley from Causeway Bay Road, Caroline Hill and Lefthill Hill Road.

Converging on Valley

Some thousands of people of all nationalities made Happy Valley their focal point during the late afternoon and before 5 p.m. there was a heavy stream issuing into the race course. By the time the troops and detachments had filed into the ground, three-quarters of the circle was completely lined by Chinese attracted by the martial music and marching men.

The troops moved into formation very smartly and promptly. The infantry wore shorts and helmets and made a neat patch of brown relieved at either end by the white uniforms of the police and naval representatives. Marching on the field the Ulsters could be picked out by their characteristic style of carrying arms at the trail, while the well known white goat of the Fusiliers made them easily distinguishable from the distance of the stands.

Owing to the absence of the fleet, on their northern summer cruise, the naval detachment was very small.

Lined up on the crisp turf within the race course facing the enclosures and stands the troops and units presented an imposing spectacle, and despite the variety of their uniforms the smart manner in which they marched and occupied their positions successfully united them into one organization for the purpose of the day.

In Review Order

The order of parade from North to South was as follows: Royal Navy, Royal Marines, 8th Heavy Brigade, R.A., Anti-Aircraft Brigade, R.A., Royal Artillery, Hongkong and Singapore Brigade, R.A., Fortress R.E.'s, 2nd Bn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, 2nd Bn. East Lancashire Regiment, 1st Bn. Royal Ulster Rifles, 1/8th Punjab Regiment, Royal Army Service Corps, Royal Army Ordnance Corps, Hongkong Mule Corps, Royal Air Force, Hongkong Naval Volunteer Force, Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps, Hongkong Police, St. John Ambulance Brigade.

Behind the parade were drawn up the massed bands of the three army battalions under the command of Lieutenant A. B. Yule, 2nd Bn. East Lancashire Regiment. The Punjab Regiment were privileged to march past their own band.

The Hongkong Police were parading in a Birthday Review for the first time.

Over 4,000 men were assembled on the parade ground by a quarter past five and the enclosures were amply packed with spectators. Among the latter accommodation had been reserved for officers of the Services and Volunteer forces with their families and friends, members of the Q.A.I.M.N.S., the British Legion, non-commissioned officers and families, ratings and ranks and families, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and school children from the Garrison Schools and Colonial Schools.

Lady Caldecott arrived shortly after 5 o'clock and took a seat next to the saluting base, a raised platform encircled with red and blue bunting. On either side a line of spectators occupied chairs and seats.

Colonel A. A. Burrows, R.A., took charge of the parade until the arrival of His Excellency the G.O.C., Major General A. W. Bartholomew, who rode on the field at 5.15 p.m. accom-

"That's the idea, old chap. Keep on yelling for your Baby's Own Tablets!"

FEW BABIES CRY FOR NOTHING.

They may seem to, but as a rule investigation proves that something is wrong, somewhere, which is the cause of their tears.

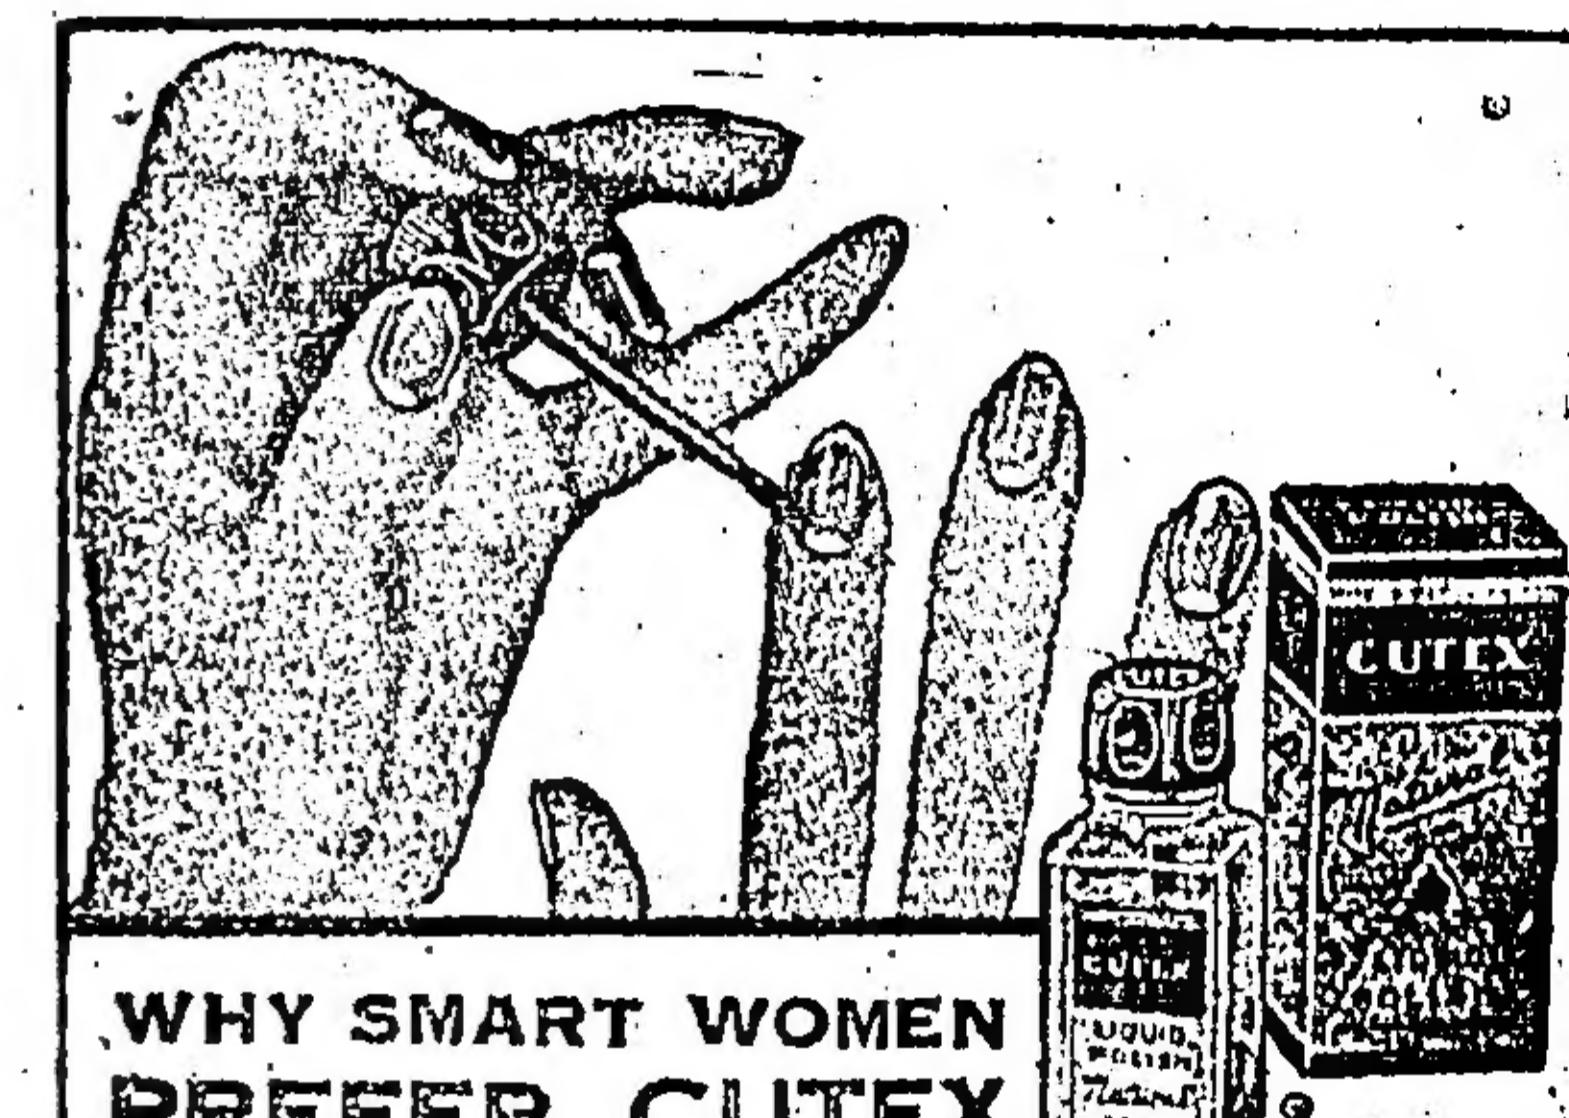

It may be an internal pain, or it may be an external pain. Pins are easily adjusted. Palms in babies, mostly arise in the stomach or bowels, and in such cases a little dose of Baby's Own Tablets usually sets matters right.

Baby's Own Tablets are pleasant tasting, therefore easily administered, and are guaranteed absolutely harmless. Mildly laxative in action, they quickly bring about a gentle movement of the bowels, which immediately relieves colic and grilling, sweetens the stomach and aids digestion. At the same time they cool feverishness, expel worms if present, and so quiet the nerves in a perfectly natural way that the little one drops off into a sound healthful sleep, from which it awakens restored, refreshed, and hungry for its next meal.

In colds and cough, too, Baby's Own Tablets are a well-proven aid, and for the alleviation of teething pains and difficulties their efficacy is unsurpassed. No home where there are infants and little children should be without them. Of chemists everywhere,

Preparations

It is most important that the skin should be cleansed morning and night with CLEANSING CREAM, as this cream dissolves and removes all dust and powder from the skin. It leaves the skin clear and smooth.

To tone the skin pat on ARDEN'S SKIN TONIC, this is a mild astringent which clears the skin and closes enlarged pores.

Some skins may need a stronger astringent; for that type of skin SPECIAL ASTRINGENT is excellent. It firms loose skin and flabby tissues, braces and lifts drooping muscles.

Now nourish the skin with ORANGE SKIN FOOD if you have a thin face or lines and wrinkles. This cream is excellent for filling out hollows and removing wrinkles.

If you have a full face then VELVA CREAM is used, as this nourishes the tissues without fattening the skin in any way.

DEATH INQUIRIES

From time to time, the question has cropped up of the desirability of instituting in Hongkong the English system of coroner's inquests so far as sudden deaths, or deaths under suspicious or unnatural circumstances, are concerned. In the early days of the Colony that system was in force, but in 1888 the office of Coroner was abolished, the powers hitherto exercised by that official being delegated to Magistrates, who have since exercised them. Under the Coroners Abolition Ordinance, it is provided that "whenever any person dies suddenly, or by accident, or by violence, or under suspicious circumstances, or whenever any dead body is found within the Colony, or is brought into the Colony, the Magistrate may, if he considers an inquiry to be necessary, enquire into the cause of death of such person." It is further laid down that the inquiry may be carried out with or without the assistance of a jury. Under the discretion vested in the Magistrate, not a tithe of the cases which come under one or other of the specified groups is the subject of public inquiry in Hongkong. The system at present operated is the Scottish system of magisterial inquiries, and it is to continue. An important variation is, however, to be put into force here, under which in every case where a Magistrate deems an inquiry unnecessary the relevant papers are to be sent to the Attorney General, who will have the power to order one if it appears to him advisable in the public interest. This is a step in the right direction, although there will still be a considerable section of the community who would prefer that the English system be revived in its entirety. The investing of Crown officers with discretion in the matter is not altogether satisfactory, since there is no guarantee to meet his death in suspicious circumstances. Under existing conditions, the operation of the law leaves a good deal to be desired. We can only hope that, with the change now announced, the position may be placed on a far more satisfactory footing.

Statistics show that the quota of British films shown rose from five per cent. in 1928 to twenty-five per cent. in 1935. More British films have been acquired and shown by the cinemas than the minimum required by the Act, and the production of British "feature" films has risen from about thirty in 1927, the year before the Act came into effect, to 189 in 1935. The good effects of the Act have not been confined to the home market. The producing companies have been able to proceed with more ambitious schemes, and the more important British films are now admired all over the world. What is called the Documentary Film has been developed since the passing of the Cinematograph Films Act, and in the production of such films Great Britain is supreme. As documentary films suffer certain disadvantages under this Act, an effort will be made in 1938 to introduce reforms in their favour.

In determining whether an inquiry should or should not be held, there is the further point that openly-conducted investigations might well have a distinct value, by reason of the publicity afforded, in clearing up doubtful points. In some cases, even, such publicity might lead to the detection of criminal acts where the deceased person has met his death in suspicious circumstances. Under existing conditions, the operation of the law leaves a good deal to be desired. We can only hope that, with the change now announced, the position may be placed on a far more satisfactory footing.

THIS week commenced the monthly Criminal Sessions of this Colony.

In the commonplace and rather dingy building of the Supreme Court, justice is dispensed by impartial men wearing the gowns of legal authority, while throngs of Chinese ignorant of court procedure but obedient to the law under which they have come to live, will whisper in the back benches.

Bare and plain as that building is, it has witnessed remarkable scenes of emotion, retribution and penitence. There is a story gradually clothing its stone walls like the first leaves of a long book which will not be finished until the last sentence of death or imprisonment has been passed and workmen have raised a dust screen over its demolition.

With all their love of imparting the air of ordinary everyday things to the most powerful drama of the courts, the English have made a small concession to the sanctity of this building by the erection of a figure of Justice on its roof. How many have seen it? And yet for years that graceful symbolic maiden has balanced her scales and gazed with blindfold eyes across a City she will never see.

Inside her walls, the curious can get a tingling of the spine from glancing over the relics of old trials which are kept in the clerk's rooms. Musty labels written in the bold hand of a succession of satellites of Justice, bear brief but eloquent testimony of their "one far, fierce hour."

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE BRITISH FILM

A few years ago the British film industry was struggling desperately to survive and grow. During the War Hollywood built up an enormous industry and its productions had become world famous. It seemed as if no other country would be able to compete with the United States of America in the world film market. Then came a change. The development of the sound film was a handicap to American productions. Hollywood lacked essentials—voices. But another factor was introduced, giving British producers a better opportunity to compete in the world market: that was the passing of the Cinematograph Films Act by Parliament in 1927. This Act came into operation on the first of January, 1928, and it will expire on September 30, 1938. Its main purpose was to help the film industry by ensuring that a certain percentage of films shown in Great Britain should be British made.

Statistics show that the quota of British films shown rose from five per cent. in 1928 to twenty-five per cent. in 1935. More British films have been acquired and shown by the cinemas than the minimum required by the Act, and the production of British "feature" films has risen from about thirty in 1927, the year before the Act came into effect, to 189 in 1935. The good effects of the Act have not been confined to the home market. What is called the Documentary Film has been developed since the passing of the Cinematograph Films Act, and in the production of such films Great Britain is supreme. Mid-Summer

of Crime

Supreme Court sessions began again on Monday... Somebody will be on trial all through this week in the dock where Cheng Kwok-yau and the Haiching pirates were sentenced.

A knife that slew a man, sent stopped the bounds of propriety. Another to the gallows, and most horrible of all is an life long clan feud—exhibit which never saw the shuffle in their seats and the usher intones "Coo-ou-our!" Everybody rises as the judge enters and bows briefly before settling himself in his throne.

The Usher proclaims the opening of sessions, the cases are called, the Chinese interpreter's voice rings over all. To the prisoner in the dock between stalwart warders the interpreter seems the only link between him and a strange world.

To us too, it is a strange world and at that we will leave it. We go out into the bright sunshine and with some relief say farewell to the world presided over by that blind impartial figure of Justice.

questions and had their tales of shame or dishonesty brought into the light of day.

Through the door of the bankruptcy court you can see the raised seat of the Chief Justice, canopied with carved woodwork, set irrevocably apart from the body of the court, occupied by the litigants, their clients and witnesses.

Facing the chair the prisoner stands in the high dock which he enters by a subterranean stairway. Brass rails surmount the woodwork. They are polished frequently where anxious hands have held for support while waiting for jury's verdict and Judge's sentence.

WHILE waiting for the court to begin, the curious have time to ponder on the wires which run overhead the length and breadth of the court. They are there to aid the bad acoustics. Inevitably there is a clock and calendar. Time is of no importance in the dispensation of the law but Time is the great factor that weighs heavily on each guilty mind.

Counsel sit round the long table between judge and prisoner, police officers rattle their accoutrements as they look to last minute details, the jury are there to aid the bad acoustics. Everybody rises as the judge enters and bows briefly before settling himself in his throne.

The Usher proclaims the opening of sessions, the cases are called, the Chinese interpreter's voice rings over all. To the prisoner in the dock between stalwart warders the interpreter seems the only link between him and a strange world.

To us too, it is a strange world and at that we will leave it. We go out into the bright sunshine and with some relief say farewell to the world presided over by that blind impartial figure of Justice.

KILL WORRY OR IT WILL KILL YOU

WORRY is the characteristic scourge of the modern world. As man's inventive skill begets new marvels of machinery, and as the pace of life grows faster and faster the strain on our nerves is greater than ever before.

Can we learn to withstand the strain? Is our strength equal to our genius? Yes. The power of the human will is immeasurable. Man's story shows that there is no problem which cannot be surmounted.

Let us see what are the causes of depression and other nervous disorders brought on by worry.

First, the cause may be some physical ailment or disease. Body and spirit are inseparable, inter-connected and interactive. A sluggish liver makes the clouds seem very black; some business or emotional upset often brings on digestive trouble.

Hence the main essential is to make sure that we are physically fit. As a preventive measure this is invaluable, and far from difficult. Sleep is our chief need for good health. Not just any kind of sleep. It is the quality that matters. Half-an-hour of rest often brings more good than ten or twelve hours of drug-induced stupor or of restless semi-consciousness. And we can learn to sleep if we try.

When we go to bed we must remind ourselves that our purpose is to sleep. Not to think over, not to work things out, not to come to decisions, but to close the mind's eye as well as the body's.

Each day we must take sufficient exercise—and walking is the readiest medium—to tire without exhausting the body. Equally we should use our brains. In mental activity every day, enough to make the mind pleasantly weary.

Diet is an important factor in promoting sleep. The rules of eating are obvious, but we constantly break them. Don't eat heavy foods late at night. Don't over-eat. Don't have a lop-sided meal of all meat and no vegetables, or all fat-making foods and none that contain iron. We need no elaborate table of vitamins to regulate our eating along commonsense lines.

SIDE GLANCES By George Clark

"I only want to scare him. Is there some way I can just almost get a divorce?"

As a remedial step we are apt to overlook the necessity of setting our bodies right before our mental and nervous troubles can be conquered. We may ask advice, we may be persuaded to consult a psycho-analyst or psycho-therapist (mental healer), but we should never fail to see a doctor as well. Indeed, it is mark of the trustworthy psychological consultant that he inquires about the physical state of his patients before suggesting any treatment.

There are quacks who bring a serious and important profession into disrepute, but they may be known at once if they show no concern as to the body's well-being.

About the non-physical causes of worry we often deceive ourselves, and so aggravate the trouble. Overwork is rarely the root explanation. It is astonishing how much work a human being can get through. Think of Bernard Shaw, who can still do sixteen hours a day at the age of 80, and is there a more cheerful person? Lloyd George is another seemingly tireless man. These are not exceptions to the rule, but only to the general practice. We should look on them as models to be emulated.

Work never killed anyone, says the old saw. But worry kills many and spoils the lives of multitudes. What is the difference? Work is activity; worry is malingering time. When we are faced with a difficulty we must work it out. We decide upon a course of action. When we worry we are not doing anything about the trouble, but letting the needle stay in the groove, so to speak, reiterating the same excuse over and over again. That wears the record out in time. We must give the needle a push—the rest of the record may be well worth listening to.

Avoid worry—act! Often that means doing something unpleasant, distasteful, difficult, and even dangerous. But power and confidence grow with use, and the very first time we take a bold step our outlook is mightily changed.

Let us face the truth that our worries are frequently due to our refusal to do anything about them. We are timid; we do nothing, we build up a heap of grievances against the world to justify us—but the worry persists.

Remember, fundamentally, that it is a blessing to be alive. The world is not a featherbed; if it were it would be stuffy. But for us all the simple joys of existence are available.

One need not be rich to laugh, Love and sympathy do not belong only to the wealthy, or to physical giants, or to the intellectually brilliant. Within us lies latent the limitless power of the human will to face our destiny smilingly. This is the lesson of psychology as it is of Christianity. It remains true whatever the conditions of life, whatever political system rules us, whatever economic troubles beset us, however science may change the world.

As we realize the power of the human spirit and increase it with use, worry will disappear, for it is a parasite that cannot grow on the resolute.

THOUSANDS THRILL TO WIMBLEDON SHOCKS

Mrs. Sarah Fabyan and Miss Scriven Are Defeated

FRAULEIN HORN TRIUMPHS

SUSAN NOEL PUTS OUT EX-SOUTH AFRICAN CHAMPION

Wimbledon's sensation-mongers were given two satisfying thrills yesterday. They saw Mrs. Sarah Fabyan, formerly Miss Sarah Palfrey, the "seeded" American Wightman Cup player, ousted from the first round of the women's singles championship by Fraulein Horn of Germany, and almost immediately afterwards witnessed the fall of Miss Peggy Scriven, an important English "hope".

DOROTHY ROUND WINS

BEATS BETTY NUTHALL

MISS NANCY LYLE DEFEATED

London, June 23.

Miss Dorothy Round, England's favourite for the women's singles title at Wimbledon to-day engaged in a great struggle with Miss Betty Nuthall for right of entering the third round. She finally beat "Our Betty" in straight sets of 9-7, 6-3.

Both players received first round byes and Miss Round's progress has therefore been materially lightened. Countess de Lavaldone, formerly the vivacious Senorita D'Alvarez of Spain enjoyed a comfortable passage into the second round at the expense of an English player, Mrs. Kirk.

Businesslike Miss Helen Jacobs chopped her way to a straight sets victory with the loss of one game

ONE WON, OTHER LOST

The removal of Mrs. Fabyan is going to mean a great deal to players like Miss Kay Stammers, Senorita Lizana and Miss Dorothy Round, as she was considered, next to Miss Helen Jacobs, as the most serious of the overseas challengers for the women's title.

Fraulein Horn, a young player who has never entirely fulfilled the promise of 1932 when she was ranked eighth in the World's First Ten, beat Mrs. Fabyan in straight sets. The first she won in the ninth game thanks chiefly to an early break-through which she succeeded in consolidating.

The second set was bitterly contested and went to 7-5. During this period the German player revealed the German player's masterly volleys and model tactics against an opponent who tried her hardest to recover from a losing position.

This victory ranks as one of Fraulein Horn's best achievements since her sparkling display in 1932 which won for her the British Midland Counties singles title and the Welsh Doubles Championship.

MISS SCRIVEN SURPRISED

Not less unexpected was the elimination of Miss Margaret Scriven, England's No. 4 ranking player, by Miss Joan Saunders, who has not appeared in the English national ranking list for at least four years.

Miss Saunders accomplished the feat of beating Miss Scriven in three sets, winning the first at 6-4, losing the second at 1-0 and winning the final at 6-4.

Miss Scriven, twice winner of the French championship, and an ex-Wightman Cupper, was taken completely by surprise. She recovered strongly in the second set and appeared safe for a win. But Miss Saunders regained her touch in the third set and deservedly ran out a winner.

Miss Susan Noel earned a notable triumph in disposing of Mrs. "Bunny" Allister, South Africa's No. 1 ranking player. She did this in straight sets with the loss of four games. Mrs. Allister, who is the South African champion, was unable to get her famous forehand drive into working order, and Miss Noel was able to dictate the terms throughout.

Miss Kay Stammers had an easy passage against Miss Violet King, another English girl, winning with the loss of three games.

In another second round tie, both players having received first round byes, Miss Jacqueline Goldschmidt of France beat Miss Nancy Lyle, British Wightman Cup player with unexpected ease. Miss Lyle secured three games in the first set and two in the second.

and forced both sets to the tenth game before admitting defeat.

Glorious weather prevailed to-day, and an unusually large crowd revelled in what is known as "Ladies' Day". The majority of matches were in the first round of the women's singles, and there were surprises in plenty.

CARNERA QUILTS RINGS, BOOKS ZEPPELIN BERTH

I Fight No More; I Farm

New York, May 29.

Primo Carnera is finished with public life. His gloves, that once won him the world heavy-weight championship, are hung up for good.

The man-mountain is going to spend the rest of his days as a quiet, ineffective little molehill, in his native Italy.

He is going to nurse his left leg, which became paralysed in the ninth round of his fight with Negro Leroy Haynes in New York last night and caused him to lose on a technical knockout.

Carnera packed his bags to-day.

NOW FOR PEACE

"I fight no more," he said. "I finish. I am washed up. I thought I come back, but now I know I go for ever. Last night decided me. I want now peace."

"I go to my farm in Sequia, Italy, and I settle down. No more fights, no more courts, no more quarrels over dough—just peace."

Carnera asked his manager, Louis Sorel, for confirmation.

Said Sorel, "It's official this time. Carnera returns to Italy."

"Yes," interrupted the former champion. "I make reservation in Hindenburg Zoppeln. I go her next trip—and that is good-bye to America, good-bye to the ring for ever. I become good farmer instead."

(Referee stopped fight forty seconds after ninth round began. Six policemen carried Carnera to his dressing-room.)

KHO AND LUM AT THEIR BEST

Brilliant Itoh

Gordon Lum and Kho Sin-chie, playing in the first round of the men's doubles at Wimbledon yesterday struck their best form since arriving in Europe two months ago when they beat G. E. Godsell and H. B. Purcell in straight sets of 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

To accomplish this the Chinese Davis Cuppers played sparkling tennis. They were much too fast and powerful for the opposition who had no counter for some daring volleys and terrible smashers.

E. Itoh, who is playing better now than ever before, figured in an exceptionally fine victory with Cunningham the American, against Leopold de Borman and Jacques Van Den Eynde of Belgium.

Itoh on Monday won his singles in most impressive style while recently in the Oxford v. Cambridge tennis match he won both singles and doubles, being the only Cantab to achieve this distinction.

Against de Borman and Van Den Eynde, Itoh monopolised the court with his masterly volleys, delicate placement and decisive overhead.

It came as no surprise to see W. C. Choy and J. Ho another Chinese couple beaten by I. H. Whenteroff and K. C. Gundar-Dower. Last year Whenteroff and Gundar-Dower caused the biggest upset in the Wimbledon doubles by eliminating Menzel and Hecht on the No. 2 court and recent successes in English spring tournaments have indicated that they will be a menace to the majority of pairs at Wimbledon this year.

The were never extended and for the most part, outclassed.

Very Few U.S. Athletes Are
100 Per Cent. AmericanMOSTLY OF FOREIGN
EXCEPTIONS

New York.
Americans like to boast of their prowess in almost all fields of athletics, yet there are comparatively few athletes who can truly call themselves "one hundred per cent. Americans."

A survey of the current sports master reveals that a good majority of the nation's outstanding athletes are of foreign parentage, and in some cases of foreign birth.

No sport seems to be an exception to the rule, not even the "typically American" game of baseball.

Although golf is traditionally a sport of the Scots, some of the nation's most skillful golfers happen to be of Italian descent. One of the great golf champions of all times is Gene Sarazen, whose parents were Italian immigrants. Other golf stars of Italian lineage, one generation removed, include Tony Manero, John Revolta, Tony Perna and Joe Turnea. Many other so-called American golfing aces happen to be born in England or Scotland, including Tom Armour, former professional golf champion, Harry Cooper, Bobby Cruickshank, one of the sport's leading money prize winners, MacDonald Smith and Charles Lacey.

BOXING COSMOPOLIS

Boxing is monopolized by no particular nation. Virtually every boxer of any consequence was born of either Italian, German, Polish, Slavic, Irish, or Russian parents. Heavy-weight champion Tony Canzoneri's father was a feather-weight champion Freddie Miller's German; Middle-weight champion-champion Babe Rizzo, Polish; Welterweight champion Barney Ross, Russian.

Other top-flight boxers and their descent include former middle-weight champion Teddy Yarosc, Polish; former welterweight champion Young Corbett III, Italian; former junior lightweight champion Johnny Jadić, Ukrainian; former bantamweight champion Lou Salica, Italian; former flyweight champion Midge Wolfson, Italian; Joe Banovic, Slav; Charlie Retzlaff, German; Ray Impellette, Italian; Patay Perrone, Italian; Max Marek, Polish; Steve Dudas, Hungarian; Steve Hatalko, Ukrainian; Eddie Zivic, Croatian and Tony Shucic, Italian.

The rolls of baseball have such a wide variety of foreign names that they seem like the roster of the League of Nations. One of the pitching stars on the New York Yankees has Lill team is Vernon Gomez, whose father was born in Malibid. Another Yankee pitcher, Vitasas Cesnirius Tamulis, was born in Lithuania and came here as a child. Tony Lazzeri, one of the most popular men in baseball to-day, was born of Italian parents. Other outstanding players claiming foreign parentage include Frank P. Crosetti, Italian; Joe Di Maggio, Italian; Earl J. Adams, German; George F. Blaeholder, German; Robert A. Hoken, Lithuanian; Edward A. Brant, German; Edward J. Cibicki, Polish; Roger M. Cramer, Dutch; Tony Cuccinello, Italian; Gene de Sautel, French; Leo Ernest Durocher, French; Lewis Albert Fonseca, Portuguese; Lou Gehrig, German; Richard R. Gyselman, Dutch; Oral C. Hildebrand, German; Silas K. Johnson, Norwegian; Sylvester Johnson, Norwegian; Adolf Lautens Liski, Czechoslovakian; Alfonso Lopez, Spanish; George M. Melville, Spanish; Antoni Natale Lombardi, Italian; Antoni E. Pietruszka, Polish and George W. Pingras, Danish. Even the great Babe Ruth, one of the most colourful figures in American sports, was of German descent.

ONLY TENNIS AND POLO

Track and field is studded with many athletes of foreign extraction, including Eugene Tunney, Javelin thrower who is expected to be on the Olympic team and William Steiner, steeplechase runner. Tauno is of Polish descent, and Steiner of German. College football, this sport which during the fall season attracts the greatest throngs, also has a good majority of stars whose parents were

WASHINGTON
WINSInter-Collegiate Boat Race

In the four mile race Washington won for the first time since 1926. California was second and the Navy third. It was one of the hardest regatta battles in history. Washington led for the first three quarters of a mile and then the Navy took the lead. After the first mile California forged ahead and held the lead to the two mile post.

There were 80,000 cheering spectators to see Washington put on a terrific sprint over the final mile. The crew were stroking 35 and gained the lead from third place. Columbia was fourth with Cornell, Pennsylvania and Syracuse finishing in that order.

Washington completed the course in 19 mins. 9.6 secs., while California took 10 mins. 12.4 secs., and the Navy 10 mins. 16.8 secs.

In the junior three mile race Washington won in 14 mins. 42.4 secs. The Navy was second and Cornell third. The Navy stole the lead at the quarter mile mark but Washington, stroking 32, took the lead after two miles and were ahead for the remainder of the race.—United Press.

POLICE VICTORIES

Two Bowls Pairs Win In Open Championship

Two Lawn Bowls Pairs Championship matches were decided on the Craigengower Cricket Club green on Monday, resulting in two Police R. C. representatives qualifying for the third round and two for the fourth round.

In the second round of the competition L. Glendinning and J. Shepherd beat S.O. Bux and A. R. Minu of the Indian R.C., by 18 shots to 17, while in the third round W. G. Gribble and W. Mai won from N. J. Bobbington, and A. Hyde Lay, Kowloon Cricket Club, by 27 shots to 12.

Glendinning and Shepherd will now meet C. J. Taechi and R. Bain on the Kowloon Bowling Green on Monday next.

BABE DIDRICKSON'S
HOLE-IN-ONEOver Oakmont Country
Club Course

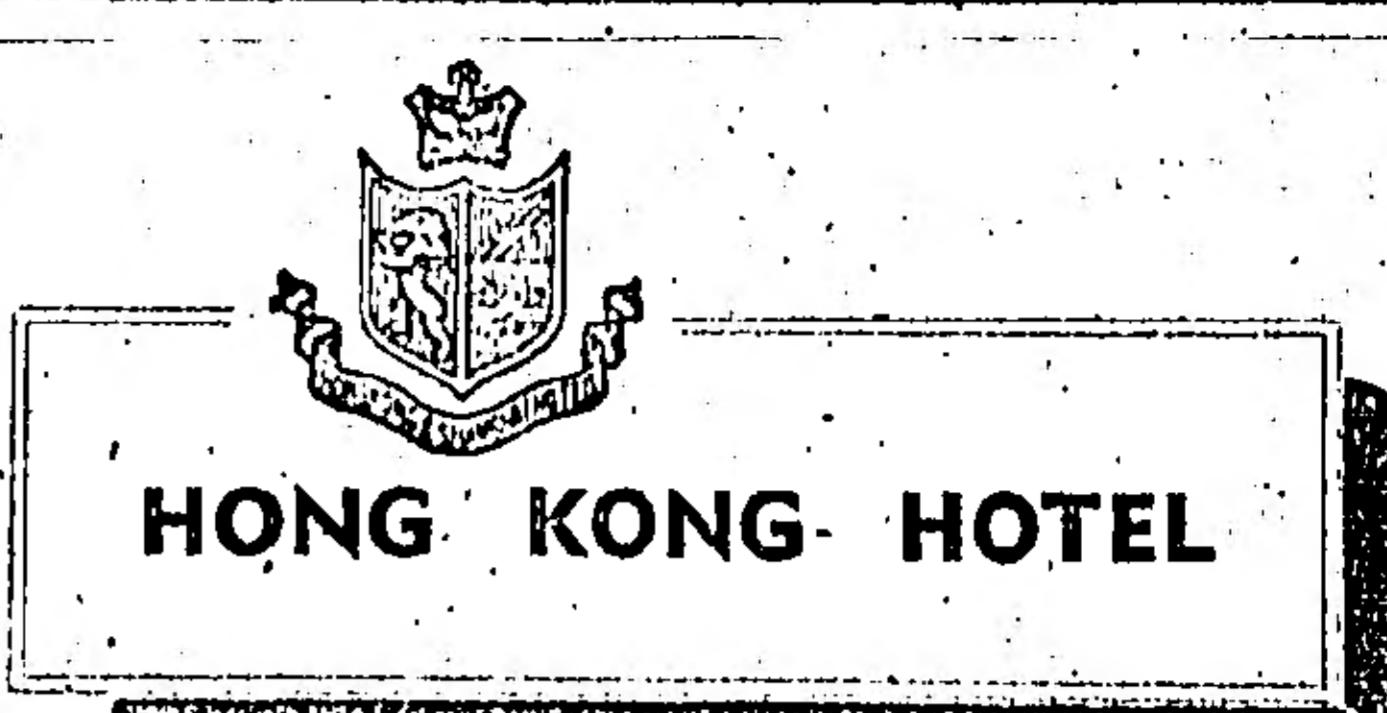

Glendale, Cal., June 15.
Mildred (Babe) Didrikson, the "one-woman, track team" who has achieved the greatest heights in all sorts of sports competition, has now achieved the golfer's dream—a hole-in-one.

Playing with the veteran professional, MacDonald Smith, over the Oakmont Country Club course, Miss Didrikson holed out a niblick shot on the 103-yard third green.

She played on even terms with the old master of the links, turning in a 76 for the eighteen holes, just three strokes more than the Carnoustie Scot. Par for men was 70.

Born in Europe, football enthusiasts always are amused to hear the Notre Dame University team called the "Fighting Irish" because most of the players happen to be of Polish or Italian descent.

Tennis and polo appear to be the only sports which can honestly claim to be "all-American".—United Press.

CHAPTER II

MICHAEL FELT happy. All signs indicated his arrival in Los Angeles within the scheduled time. He had the girl—he was pretty sure of that. Aunt Charlotte to the contrary. All he needed now was a new suit and cash.

He acquired the suit in town in Colorado where they had stopped off to give the two women a chance to repair the ravages of motoring in the local beauty parlour. Michael went prospecting in a local men's furnishing store. The proprietor unburdened himself on the stranger's willow ears. Business was particularly bad because his competitor's door had acquired sole distributing rights to a certain turtle-neck sweater which was the current rage. Michael could divine his own price if he could divert that trade to his own shop.

Michael did; within an hour prospective customers for turtle-neck sweaters stopped short on their way to make their purchase at the sight of a sandwich man sporting the identical sweater. In rapid succession, a street cleaner, an errand boy and a boot-blacker passed, all outfitted in the turtle-neck vogue. The fad collapsed then and there. Men made a bee-line for the long neglected store which featured V-neck sweaters as the latest fashion. And Michael walked out with the blessings of the owner and a complete new outfit of clothes.

Paula hardly recognised him when she met him in the street.

"It's not really you," she faltered delightedly. "We're in this town less than two hours and you earn this garage outfit. You're slated to be a success!"

Michael looked around and saw that Aunt Charlotte, for once, was missing. He decided to make the most of the opportunity.

"How about celebrating?" he suggested. "Let's take the afternoon off and go to the County Fair. We can make up the time by travelling nights."

Like two youngsters playing hooky, they did the Fair thoroughly, from pinched concessions to the free circus. The climax came when Michael, backed by Paula, entered a cider drinking contest in hope of winning the grand prize of $50,000. He drank until his eyes swam only to learn when the gong sounded that a woman had won. He and Paula looked up curiously and almost fainted from shock when Aunt Charlotte stumbled groggily up to the platform to receive her prize money.

"Michael, you're behaving like a perfect fool."

"I have up until now but I'm learning things," he said bitterly. "Too bad I have to leave you in the morning because another few days with you and I'd have had a liberal education."

Paula found herself growing angry.

"Now, just a minute. I've got a few things to say—"she began furiously.

They decided to risk the loss of a few moments in a fox trot. Michael, holding Paula as close to him as he dared, wished that the dance would last forever.

"How long are you going to be in Los Angeles?" he asked as they glided slowly about the room.

"Not very long. I think I'm sailing to China."

His face fell. "China? What for?"

"I can't stay?" Michael pleaded.

"Look—could we travel the world for a boat and let me drive you across?"

"Business was particularly bad because his competitor's door had acquired sole distributing rights to a certain turtle-neck sweater which was the current rage. Michael could divine his own price if he could divert that trade to his own shop."

"I think," he observed quietly, "that you're a smart girl!"

Paula's lips quivered but the tears would not hold back. Savagely she dabbed at her eyes.

CINEMA NOTES

Sydney Howard, ambling up the rugby field with the ball tucked under his jersey and warding off gigantic opponents to score the winning try for his side, is the central figure in the up-coming climax to "Where's George?", the latest Howard picture which is at the King's Theatre today. This film puts Northern Union football on the screen for the first time, and as Sydney is the hope of the Yorkshire side, you can well imagine that the match is a diverting one. Although his play on the screen is more than a trifle erratic—he tackles the referee occasionally—in reality Sydney Howard knows more about the game than most people, as befits a Yorkshireman who was born near Leeds and who thinks Leeds the finest side in the Northern Union. He has followed the game since he was a boy, and was only too willing when his large work prevented him from travelling to Leeds to film the match between Featherstone and Broughton Rangers for use in "Where's George?" In order to film this match, by the way, the producer was granted a unique concession by the L.M.S. who stopped their Leeds express at Elstree station, close to the studios, to take the player on board. This enabled the unit to work an extra hour in the studios, and finish an important sequence with Sydney Howard, as otherwise they would have had to make a trip to London to catch the train. Sydney knows a lot, too, from personal experience about the sporting rivalry between Yorkshire and Lancashire which forms the basis of the comedy. Indeed, the whole film is "right up his street," and a subject in which he is quite at home.

"Flying Trapeze."

W. G. Fields, star of "Man on the Flying Trapeze," coming to the Star Theatre, is not only an acrobatic and master of pantomime, but his versatility extends to that of writing his own material for his inimitable type of characterisations in his screen portrayals. He accepted his contract with Paramount on the condition that he be permitted to write his own stories, his own dialogue and act in his pictures as he saw fit. Fields made this stipulation not on the grounds of conceit, but because he realized that no one but himself could justify his particular kind of hilarious antics and funny, flowery dialogue. His success in "Silent on a Kind of Old-Fashioned Way," "It's a Gift," proved his contention that he knew what sort of roles were best fitted for him. In his latest film, "Man on the Flying Trapeze," he again demonstrates his ability to select parts and stories for his humour. He has adopted an entirely new set of gags and laugh routines in his new comedy where he is cast as a humble, blundering clerk whose one aim is to get away from his nagging wife and mother-in-law to attend a wrestling match.

"The Eagle Brood."

Clarence E. Mulford's outdoor story, "The Eagle's Brood," is showing from today at the Queen's Theatre, starring William Boyd and Jimmy Cagney. "Hoopalong Cassidy" series to come to the screen and deals with more adventures encountered by Hoppy and his pal Johnny Nelson, as they serve as deputy peace officers in the old south west. Cassidy's general job is to enforce law and order in a town in the grip of a reign of terror, ruled by a lawless band, while his particular mission is to keep a promise made to an ex-

Mr. M. J. Quist Dies At Home

WORD CABLED TO HONGKONG

News was received to-day by the Netherlands Consulate here that the Consul-General, Mr. M. J. Quist, home on leave, had died suddenly. Mr. Quist's home was at Laeran.

Mr. Quist was appointed a consular cadet, eleven-consul at the position was then, on 12th March, 1906, and therefore had completed more than 30 years' service. His first appointment was to the Consulate General in London. He did not arrive a stranger, as for a time he was in a commercial office there in order to learn business methods and improve his English. He remained in London for two years, then being transferred to Hamburg. Owing to quite unforeseen circumstances his stay in the Hansa town only lasted a couple of weeks. At a moment's notice he had to leave for Singapore. There his chief was Mr. H. Spakler, now a retainer in Paris, perhaps the most brilliant Consul-General the Dutch Government ever had east of Suez. Mr. Quist went home in order to prepare for the vice-consular examination in the early autumn of 1909.

APPOINTED TO HONGKONG

Towards the close of 1910, he was in Shanghai as vice-consul. In May, 1914, he came to Hongkong in the same position; on the eve of his leave he was "sent" to Singapore for six months. The war interfering with transportation, he was obliged to travel home via Hongkong, Shanghai, Siberia, Finland, Sweden, Denmark and Germany. In spite of this, however, he reached Holland after five weeks. In 1917, when promoted a consul during home leave, he was first attached to the Dutch Legation in Rio de Janeiro, but it was impossible to proceed there without great delay and as Shanghai wanted a second man who could replace the consul-general during home leave, he was sent back to the East.

In February, 1918, Mr. Quist was sent to Yokohama to take charge of the Vice-Consulate, formerly ably looked after by the Belgian Consul General, Monsieur Bastin, and Monsieur Polain, later Charge d'Affaires in Bangkok for Belgium. He stayed there 2½ years, after which he was promoted Consul in Kobe with consular jurisdiction in the Japanese Empire.

In February, 1923, Mr. Quist was promoted a Consul General and since the beginning of March of that year had been in Hongkong.

To Plead For His Country

HAILE SELASSIE TO VISIT GENEVA

London, June 23.

It is understood that Haile Selassie will probably go to Geneva, and that he may address the League Assembly before his country.

It is learned that the Emperor's object in asking Mr. Anthony Eden to visit him was to inform him of the attitude which the Ethiopians proposed to adopt at the meeting of the League, where it is likely that it will be argued that Ethiopia is still an independent nation and that an organised resistance is not yet ended. A strong appeal for further support from other nations is expected to be made.—Reuter Special.

DANGERS FROM GASOMETERS

QUESTIONS TO BE ASKED TO-DAY

At this afternoon's meeting of the Legislative Council, the Hon. Mr. Chau Tsun-nin will ask the following questions:

With reference to the Hon. Colonial Secretary's replies to the questions asked by the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall in this Council on the 10th January, 1935, in regard to the explosion of a gasometer at West Point, will the Government state:—

(1) Whether it has been finally decided to move the gasometer at West Point to a more suitable site; and, if so, where the site is;

(2) Whether advice of the Home Authorities has been obtained as to whether special legislation for the compulsory inspection of gasometers is desirable here; and

(3) What action does the Government propose to take in regard to gasometers in other parts of the Colony?

R.A.F. CRASH INQUIRY

PLANE LANDED ON LINER'S DECK

London, June 23.

Sir Philip Sassoon, Under-Secretary for Air, replying to a question in the House of Commons concerning the forced landing of an R.A.F. torpedo-bomber on the deck of the French liner Normandie, stated that in normal circumstances it should not be necessary for aircraft to fly low over shipping during training.

He added that the whole circumstances of this crash were being carefully investigated.

He was unwilling to say more at present, he added.—Reuter Bulletin Service.

BITTER LABOUR CENSURE

League state if Italy were allowed to triumph over Ethiopia.

Not all the British Empire approved of dropping the sanctions, he went on. The Dominion most nearly affected (South Africa) was strongly opposed to the move. What would be the effect on the minds of the natives of South Africa? he asked.

If Signor Mussolini wished to extend his Dominions, would Mr. Baldwin fight for Somaliland, the Sudan and Kenya?

It would have been the Labour Party's policy to have resisted an aggressor.

Serious Set-Back

Replying for the Government, Sir John Simon agreed that the League had received a serious set-back, but it was necessary to examine the situation with a sense of realities. The distress over the League's failure was just as keenly felt by the Government and its supporters as by the Labourites.

With regard to oil sanctions, Sir John pointed out that the United States had no power to prohibit experts of oil. He recalled that Mr. Eden had said that Britain would be very glad to see oil sanctions applied, but he protested at the unfairness of treating failure to impose oil sanctions as a crime of the British Government's.

The purpose of sanctions ceased when the war was finished, he said.

Britain's Power.

Very ridiculous things had been said, Sir John went on. It had been suggested that the British Navy in the Mediterranean would have been overwhelmed in any sanctions war. He did not doubt that the Navy would have given a very good account of itself, but with the present situation in Europe and the grave dangers surrounding the country, he was not prepared to see a single ship sunk even in a successful battle with the cause of Ethiopia.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, for Opposition Liberals, asserted that throughout the whole crisis the Government had been diverted by fear. The economic power of the League had Italy in its grip, he said, and the Government was throwing away this weapon just when it was becoming effective.

The Government's policy put a premium on successful aggression and made a world safe for dictators.

Brussels, June 23.

The Belgian Chamber of Deputies to-day voted for the abolition of anti-Italian sanctions.—United Press.

Action Not Condoned.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, said it was not the Government's intention to condone Italy's action.

Britain had no power to lend money to Italy and they had no intention of seeking such powers.

Collective security, he said, had failed because of the reluctance of nearly all the nations of Europe to proceed with military sanctions.

The League's duty now, he said, was to see what it could do in the light of recent experience. British policy, he added, was still based on the League of Nations.—Reuter.

LEAGUE NOT ABANDONED Baldwin Makes Policy Clear

ANSWERS OPPONENT'S BITTER CRITICISM

London, June 23. The House of Commons to-day defeated the labour vote of censure motion by a strong majority, and members of the Government, including the Prime Minister, Mr. Stanley Baldwin, spoke in defence of the altered British attitude which contemplated the abandoning of sanctions.

During the course of the debate the Government was subjected to a bitter fire from the Opposition leaders, Mr. Clement Attlee, Labour, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal.

Mr. Baldwin paid tribute to Mr. Eden, who had been heart and soul in the struggle to maintain the League, he said.

The Government rejected the idea of continuing and intensifying sanctions, because nothing but military action could now make any difference in the status of Italy and Ethiopia.

The League had received a bad set-back, but failure of the first attempt to apply collective security in no way meant the death of the League of Nations. This matter must be taken up by the Assembly at its September session.

The Government at present was engaged not only in forming its own conclusions, but was having informal exchanges of views with the Dominion Governments and the Governments of other members of the League, particularly the French, for the Government's object was to appease the situation.

Won't Desert Europe

There was no foundation in any suggestion that the Government was planning to leave the whole of Europe to look after itself, provided they could safeguard themselves in the West.

It might come to that if the League of Nations broke down ultimately. But he had every hope that when negotiations were undertaken by the great countries, they could provide for the security of Central Europe states as they hoped to provide for themselves.

Censure Defeated

London, June 23. The House of Commons to-day rejected the Labour Opposition's motion of censure in connection with the Government's foreign policy, particularly the decision to abandon sanctions, by a vote of 384 to 170.

Less Tension

There was a less tense atmosphere in the House of Commons to-day compared with Thursday last, when Mr. Clement Attlee moved the Labourite motion of non-confidence consequent upon the Government's decision to abandon sanctions.

Just before the session Mr. Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, conferred with Emperor Haile Selassie of Ethiopia for three-quarters of an hour.

Signor Dino Grandi, the Italian Ambassador, listened to the debate from the Gallery.

Feeble Policy

Mr. Attlee said the Government had pursued a feeble, tortuous and vacillating policy for the past five years which had brought the country from the proud position of 1931. There were derisive Ministerial cheers here.

The Government had betrayed Ethiopia and destroyed the League as there was no security for any.

FRENCH PLAN FOR PEACE

No Hegemony in Mediterranean Armament Control Also Essential

Paris, June 23.

One of the most essential pillars of the European peace structure was the recognition of the necessity for association of all Mediterranean states in an agreement guaranteeing that no hegemony would be established in that sphere.

This was the contention of M. Yves Delbos, the French statesman, speaking in the Chamber of Deputies to-day in respect to the preservation of security.

He hoped, he said, that an agreement would be reached in the West of Europe, ending the crisis which began on March 7, but this did not depend upon France alone. France was persuaded that Italy would collaborate in these tasks, M. Delbos said.

Just previously he had remarked that the continuation of sanctions could not be more than symbolic gesture, without real effectiveness, indicating the view that their useful ness had passed.

He urged Germany to remember that France had cause to doubt that nation's good intentions, particularly in view of the violation of treaties. He recalled that Germany had not yet replied to the British note asking for elucidation on points of the German peace plan, presented weeks ago.

France, stated M. Delbos, favoured progressive universal disarmament, controlled by the community of nations, without neglecting the necessities of national defence.

France would demand the control and manufacture of war material by an international committee sitting at Geneva, he went on.

In order to improve the general economic situation, France would demand the summoning of a commission to study European unity, as urged by the late M. Aristide Briand. This commission would include all European states, whether they were members of the League of Nations or not. Thus Germany's participation would be possible.

France is suffering a relapse, notes this morning, being quoted at $1,350 per $1,000 (Hongkong), but well-informed quarters declare there is now development in the military situation to warrant a further slump.

While M. Delbos had officially denied a further advance of Central Government troops, private reports received here indicate that Marshal Chiang Kai-shek is most active, paying secret flying visits to the various fronts.

FARLEY FIRES FIRST GUN Charges Financial Interests Active USING MILLIONS TO END RULE BY "NEW DEAL"

Philadelphia, June 23.

"Stripped of all camouflage the issue is this: Shall we continue the New Deal which rescued the country from disaster or despair, or shall the Government be turned back to 'the old dealers' who wrecked it?"

This was the choice put before the Democratic Party's National Convention by the Postmaster-General, Mr. James Farley, to-day.

Mr. Farley, who is chairman of the Democratic National Committee, opened the national convention with a fighting speech, broadcast throughout the nation.

Mr. Farley declared that the Republican platform for the presidential election was unsurpassed in platitudes and vague declarations.

He charged that huge financial interests were spending millions of dollars with a view to "bringing back that reeling period that had piled up great fortunes for those on the inside and financially brought the country to the verge of bankruptcy."

Mr. Farley concluded by predicting the continuation of "the real New Deal" under a sane and orderly leadership, under "that calm, capable and courageous commander, Mr. Franklin D. Roosevelt."—Reuter.

NEW DEAL WRECKERS

Philadelphia, June 23. Senator A. W. Barkley of Kentucky, in a key-note speech to the Democratic National Convention to-day, attacked the Supreme Court of the United States for wrecking so many of President F. D. Roosevelt's New Deal decrees.

He declared that the majority of "nine old men" had given a tortuous interpretation of the Constitution in their findings.

While assailing Governor Landor of Kansas, the Republican "choice" for the presidency, Senator Barkley reserved the special vials of his wrath for ex-President Herbert Hoover's charge that the New Deal was a menace to American liberty.

REPUBLICANS ANSWERED

"Behind Hoover's cry for freedom stand the immemorial pawn-brokers of the Republican Party; behind him stand the Republican Party's holding company—the American Liberty League; behind him stand every interest which seeks to coin the flesh and blood of human beings into profit, and every stock-jobber, every monopolist of privilege and power," roared the Senator.

He declared that President Roosevelt scorned the suggestion that he would assume the powers of a dictator.

He called the President a champion of fairer and more just order.—Reuter.

We want better car Parks

America tries slot-meters says A Motor Correspondent

Over in Oklahoma City they have started kerb-parking meters. These park-meters are set at intervals of 20ft. along the kerb.

When a motorist drops fifty-cents in the slot a green signal is raised.

After one hour the signal drops and any passing "cop" can tell at a glance that the car has been over-parked.

These meters were installed after an official investigation into the parking problem.

It was discovered that 80 per cent. of the valuable parking places in the city was being utilized by car owners as an all-day garage.

At any rate, Oklahoma City does recognize the parking problem and is trying to put matters on a sane basis.

We have our all-day parkers. They trust to luck. Instead of the meter we have a policeman with a notebook. By the law of the land, if you get away before he stops you the policeman has no case. In big cities hundreds of car owners every day play the game of dodging the policeman.

Inadequate Provision

Just as many cars are parked in unauthorized car parks as in official parking places.

This is because the official parking places are totally inadequate. Few authorities are taking the trouble to assist car owners in this matter. Meanwhile, the problem is becoming worse every day.

Here is the view of the London and Home Counties Traffic Advisory Committee, given in their report just published, for the year 1934-1935:

"In our view, the provision of garages and parking places off the highway, where vehicles may be parked at reasonably low rates, is a matter of great importance, and the promoters of schemes for their provision deserve every encouragement. "In accordance with the policy to which reference is made in our last report, we decided not to support a number of proposals for the appointment of public parking places where it appeared that neighbouring garages were able to accommodate the vehicles at reasonably low charges."

Excessive Charges

The experience of London motorists is not only that park facilities are poor but garage charges are often excessive.

Green shroud for the pine

THE great pine crashed to earth on a night of storm about seven years ago.

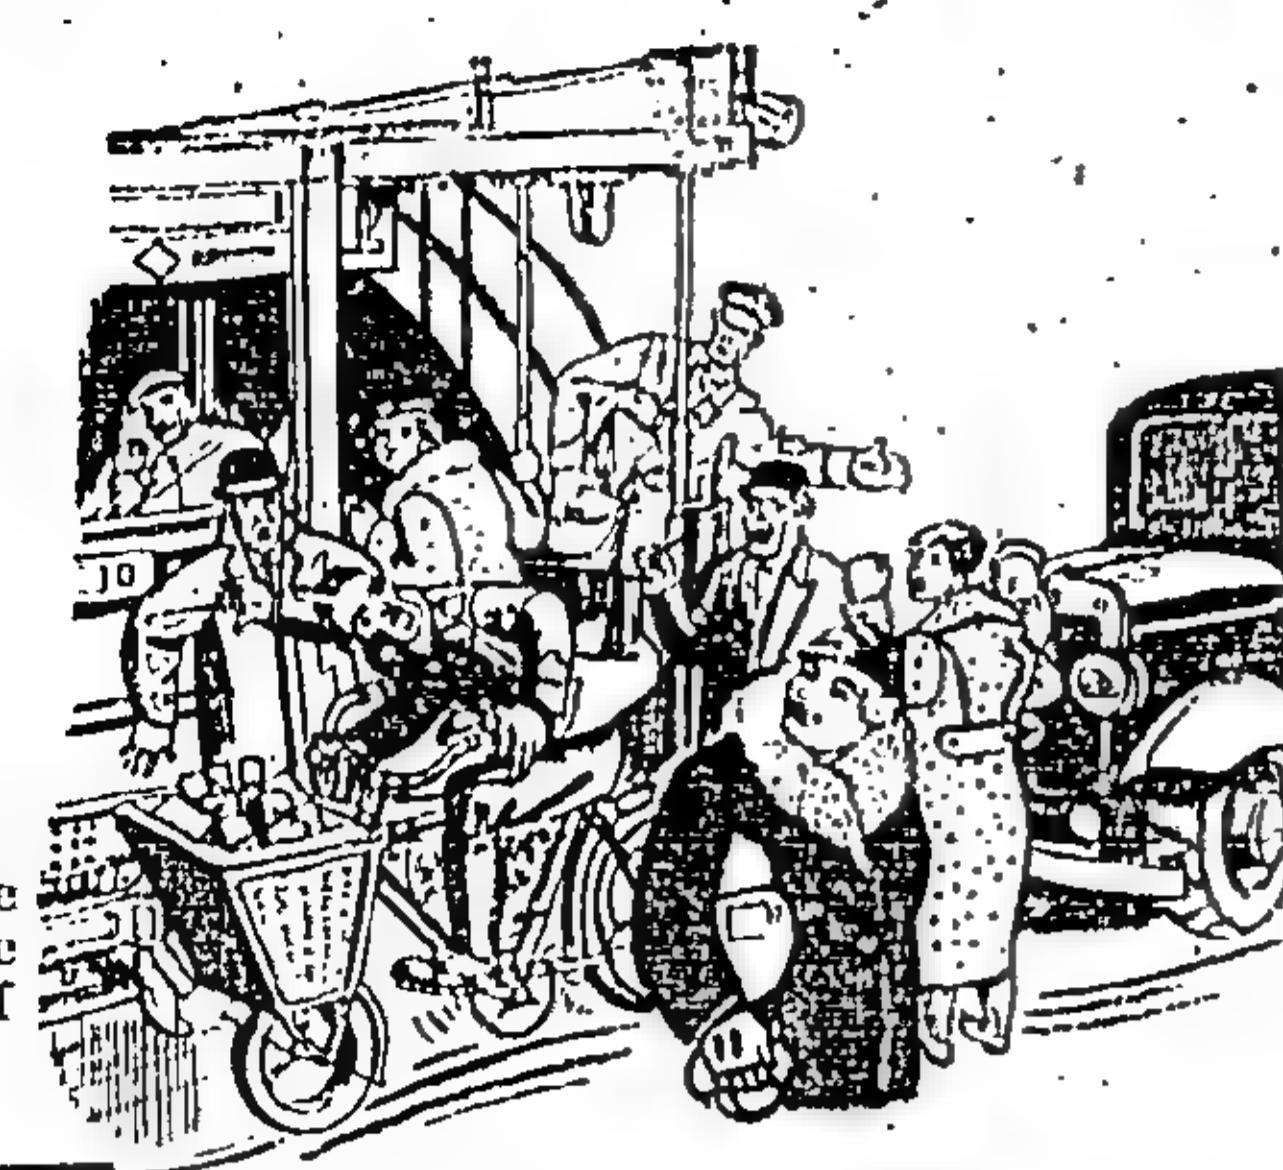

Ever since then its trunk has lain straight along the bank at the foot of the dense thorn tree above which it once towered high.

From its splintered base to its cleanly sawn head it is slowly becoming a part of the green bank on which it lies.

The moss which has cropt over the bounds left by the torn bark merges with the young grass now lapping against the sides of the prone trunk.

The bare stumps, where the branches were lopped, have turned into little towers of ivy, and there will be nothing visible throughout the summer save a long green ridge, when the nettles have grown tall enough to hide the last scarred wood from sight.

People we all know

The bicycling errand boy who WILL speed past tram stops.

There must be a lot of money in the parking business.

Away in Oklahoma City they ponched more than £2,000 in fifteen days in the park-o-meters.

The parking problem is becoming acute at Hongkong's mainland and island beaches, despite good work put in recently by the authorities. At many of the beaches, especially on the mainland, conditions are almost chaotic, and are likely to become more so this season with the enormous increase in new cars.

Government should place the car parking problem as the most important item in their propaganda for attracting visitors.

Salt Road Carpets

Away in Ithaca, N.Y., they are making their road carpets of salt.

Fast and Safe

In a book just published, "Speed on Salt" by George Eyston and W. F. Bradley (B. T. Batsford, £5 net), they tell you that salt provides the finest possible surface. You can get high speed on such a surface, and safe speed.

Salt is white—the ideal colour for making the most of your lamps.

Salt roads, according to the Ithaca experts, can be built for round about £90 a mile, compared with £300 a mile for an asphalt road.

But salt, of course, may be cheap in those parts. Anyhow, the idea is ingenious and we want ingenuity in road-building.

We are fortunate in Hongkong regarding non-skid roads for our racing people and the P.W.D. have always been fully alive to this problem. But there are one or two places on the Castle Peak road that are still danger spots.

KING'S BIRTHDAY RECEPTION

GOVERNOR AND LADY CALDECOTT AS HOSTS

Yesterday evening a reception was held at Government House, in place of the Ball which usually marks the King's Birthday. Permission was specially obtained from Home to hold the reception, which was granted despite the fact that full Court mourning does not cease until July.

For the first time, King Edward VIII's royal cipher and crown shone over the facade of Government House, the illuminated sign being visible from the other side of the harbour.

As previously announced Lady Caldecott, who arrived from England a week ago, had sufficiently recovered from indisposition to receive the guests with His Excellency the Governor though she did not undertake the strain of standing up during the whole time that the 2,000 guests, fled

Britain's Death Merchants

Secretary To Cabinet Defends Arms' Men
"BRITISH PUBLIC MISLED"

Sir Maurice Hankey, Secretary of the Cabinet for 20 years and Secretary of Imperial Defence, made a vigorous defence of private armament manufacture in a remarkable statement before the Arms Commission, in London, recently.

Evidence given by Sir Maurice at a previous session resulted in questions being asked in the House of Commons as to whether the Government approved of a Civil Servant placing his views before the Commission. The Opposition gave notice that they would raise the matter later.

Sir Maurice declared that the historical foundation of the allegations against the private manufacturer of arms was that of sand. Public opinion on this subject had been misled partly by the language of the Covenant of the League of Nations, and largely by the propagandist activities of those who brought the charges.

The inclusion of the idea of prohibiting private manufacture and trade in arms in the Covenant was, generally speaking, not summoned by the British delegation to the Peace Conference. They had, however, to meet persistent pressure from President Wilson.

Sir Maurice asked the Commission not to accept the memorandum circulated on behalf of the Admiralty in 1919 in which suppression of private manufacture was dealt with. The evidence, he said, showed that the memorandum was not, as had been implied, Admiral Wemyss's considered judgment.

AN ESSENTIAL PART

Other points from Sir Maurice's evidence are:

"Private manufacture is an essential part of our system of imperial defence.

"I have never heard even of a suspicion of intent to injure by armament firms with delegates or conferences.

"I venture to submit that the case has not been made out sufficiently to justify a prohibition, whether national or international, or any drastic reorganisation of the industry.

Speaking of the activity of Mr. Shearer at the Geneva Disarmament Conference in 1927, Sir Maurice said that it had not in any way affected the result.

"One swallow does not make a summer," he added, "and my personal experiences show that the Shearer episode was unexampled."

Sir Maurice said that since his previous evidence he had received letters thanking him as a person in a detached position for having done something to remove stigma. One letter was from the widow of a great manufacturer of armaments who had been "happily surprised" by the result.

"The use of the language of hyperbole in this matter," he went on, "must tend to mislead a public that had had neither the time nor the material to study the matters completely. In some statements, not the slightest regard has been paid by most of the witnesses to the published views of the Government."

EXTRAVAGANT LANGUAGE

The suggestion that the manufacture of arms was a business on a long-term plane was unjustified.

"The extravagant language we have heard is inappropriate and unacceptable," he went on. "This poisoning of the atmosphere increases the difficulties of those who wish to present an impartial view."

Sir Maurice criticised attempts at distortion for propaganda and complained that episodes were separated from their context and a searchlight thrown on the alleged misdeeds of private manufacturers, misdeeds usually improved on and sometimes wholly inaccurate.

One side of the case had been misrepresented and grossly exaggerated. The other had hardly been heard at all.

Sir Maurice said he thought the existence of private manufacture of arms was a negligible factor in the origin of the Great War.

UNWORTHY SUGGESTION

Referring to the alleged incompatibility of public duty and private interests, Sir Maurice said, "This unworthy suggestion that individuals cannot separate their private interests from their public duty as citizens, citizens deep into civilised society. Doctors, chemists, and nurses depend for their profit on ill-health or disease. It would be outrageous to suggest that for that reason they try and encourage epidemic disease or are lukewarm in the promotion of public health."

No one suggested, he said, that undertakers tried to increase the death-rate.

Sir Maurice spoke of the "atmosphere of nasty innuendo" about the imputation that Cabinet Ministers and other influential people owned shares in firms manufacturing armaments, and that they would be inclined to encourage disarmament.

"It is difficult to imagine how such outrageous suggestions can be seriously made," he said.

Regarding allegations of war profits, Sir Maurice asked, "Why should the temptation for profit be greater at the end of the manufacturers of armaments than in that of the doctors, the chemists, the chemical manufacturers, the undertakers, the grocers, the proprietors, the chemists, and the lawyers?"

"Let anyone hearing this evidence think of his own friends who have profits out of war," he added, "and they will probably include persons interested not only in the early stages of arms manufacture but people concerned in banking, shipping, insurance, and a vast range of other commodities essential both to civilised life and the maintenance of public force."

THE MULLINER EPISODE

Speaking of the "hard worked Mulliner episode," Sir Maurice said that one would be inclined to blame Mr. Mulliner for bringing information to the Government mainly as to the increase in Germany's capacity to manufacture guns, &c. Any patriotic citizen surely had that duty and, being a representative of an armaments firm did not exempt Mr. Mulliner.

Allegations had been made, went on Sir Maurice, that armaments firms had tried to influence public opinion through the control of newspapers in their own and other countries. Unfortunately, bribery of the foreign Press by Governments was by no means a thing of the past, but no case existed against the British manufacturer, although the weapon of the Press had been resorted to by their opponents.

BAD FOR NATIONAL PRESTIGE

Pointing out how widespread was the propaganda against the private manufacture of arms, Sir Maurice handed up a book which he said was printed for use in schools in one of the Dominions. "I would rather not mention which Dominion," remarked Sir Maurice.

Sir Maurice contended that it was prejudicial to the national interest to fling mud at the industry. It was bad for the morale of the industry, bad for national prestige, and bad for Imperial defence. He hoped that the Commission would express its opinion of the extravagance of the propaganda against the industry.

"I suggest that if the private manufacture of arms is alleged to be one of the causes of war, it is an example of the lack of balance and perspective shown in much of the evidence," he said.

Sir Maurice said that he had never held a share in a private armaments firm in his life.

Negro Ex-Convict Found Hanged In Homebound Liner

Liverpool, June 15. John McAuley, a negro, released from Walton Jail, Liverpool, a few days ago, and put aboard the liner Athos, bound for West Africa, has been found hanging in the ship.

McAuley, who was fifty, appeared in a Liverpool court case two years ago as the head of an establishment known as the "house of terror" in the foreign quarter of the city.

He was sentenced to three years' penal servitude at Manchester Assizes in March 1934, on charges of procuration and unlawful wounding. His wife, Mary McAuley, aged forty-five, was sentenced to five years' penal servitude. The judge also recommended that McAuley should be sent back to Sierra Leone, where he was born.

HEROLDIC PAGEANT

The tournament which ended on May 23, was as usual, a picture of all the services.

The programme included brilliant spectacles like the heraldic pageant of Norfolk and feats displaying the skill, modern activities, and physical fitness of Navy, Army and Air Force.

But a special sentiment attached to the excellent displays of horsemanship which were arranged, for the twilight of the horse era, in the military sense, approaches, and in future years it may be difficult to amass quite so varied talent and quite so many thrills.

Within a short time ten cavalry regiments and the Royal Horse Artillery will be on a mechanised basis, and half of the regiments which retain horses will be in India.

BRAVE SALUTE

Choices for programmes will then be more restricted. Still, this year, the horse age made a brave salute.

Famous riders and their mounts were to be seen in large numbers. Some 250 horses took part.

The Royal Horse Artillery musical drive was a farewell to these thrilling spectacles for the branch at home is in process of being mechanised. The "Sphinx" Battery, which gives the drive, goes to India next winter. The musical drives have been carried out for 60 years.

The Royal Navy gave a demonstration in the use of ropes aloft, and the Royal Marines gave a display which illustrates sport, and training.

The 2nd Battalion of the Royal Norfolk Regiment staged an historical review, harking back to the patriotism of its county in the days of the Armada menace.

There were great and brilliant scenes, in which cavalry took part.

TWO SECONDS TO LIVE

THOUGHTS OF AIRMAN WHO JUST RIGHTEDED MACHINE

London, May 28. THIS is a story of one and a half seconds; of how it feels to be certain one is about to die.

A few experts stood on a flying field near London and watched a test pilot trying out a new machine 5,000 feet above. They heard the crescendo roar of the engine as the nose dropped and the aeroplane started a power dive.

They watched the speed increasing until, at 250 m.p.h. the pilot began easing her out of the fall.

THEY GASPED

And they gasped when, as the aeroplane levelled off one wing went down and the machine fell into a vertical side slip, out of control. Each of them knew what the pilot was doing up there, struggling with his controls to master the falling craft. Each of them knew how slim his chances of surviving were.

Down the plane hurtled until, 100 feet from the ground, it came out of the fall and landed perfectly. "Superb airmanship," some one said.

Afterwards the test pilot spoke of his thoughts up there as he was falling to what he thought he death. This is what he said:

"As I came out of the dive the ailerons jammed. Down went one wing, and down we went. I did everything I knew to right her, but it seemed useless.

"I looked at the altitude meter. The needle was moving quickly over the dial, ticking off the little marks that meant the feet between the earth and me.

I WONDERED

"Time seemed to stop. You're for it, boy," I said. "You're going to hit the deck. You haven't a chance."

"I wondered how it would feel: whether we'd burst into flames.

"All the time one part of my mind was thinking, hurried thoughts, I suppose, but they seemed slow and deliberate, to go on. At the same time I was fighting to regain some sort of control. The ailerons wouldn't move. I couldn't get her out.

"Somewhere down there I could see people watching. I wondered whether my wife was watching too. I hoped she wasn't. Then it struck me that I wouldn't be able to fly the man I had an appointment with at six o'clock.

"They I thought that if I could get the wing up just a little I might hit with that. Then the crash wouldn't be so bad. I might get away with broken legs. The ground was very close then. I had one last effort.

"I tried to get her out by using the rudder. . . . It worked. Slowly she came out. I landed. My wife wasn't there. I could take that man up at six.

"I worked out how long I'd been falling. One and a half seconds.

"A man takes that long to fall off a skyscraper."

SECRET OF ERROR KEPT FOR 50 YEARS

London, June 15. SIR ARTHUR SPURGEON, retiring on Saturday from the chairmanship of the Croydon magistrates, a position which he has held for 20 years, called attention to an inaccurate tablet in the Law Courts for the first time.

"DIED" AFTER HE WAS KILLED HEART WENT ON BEATING

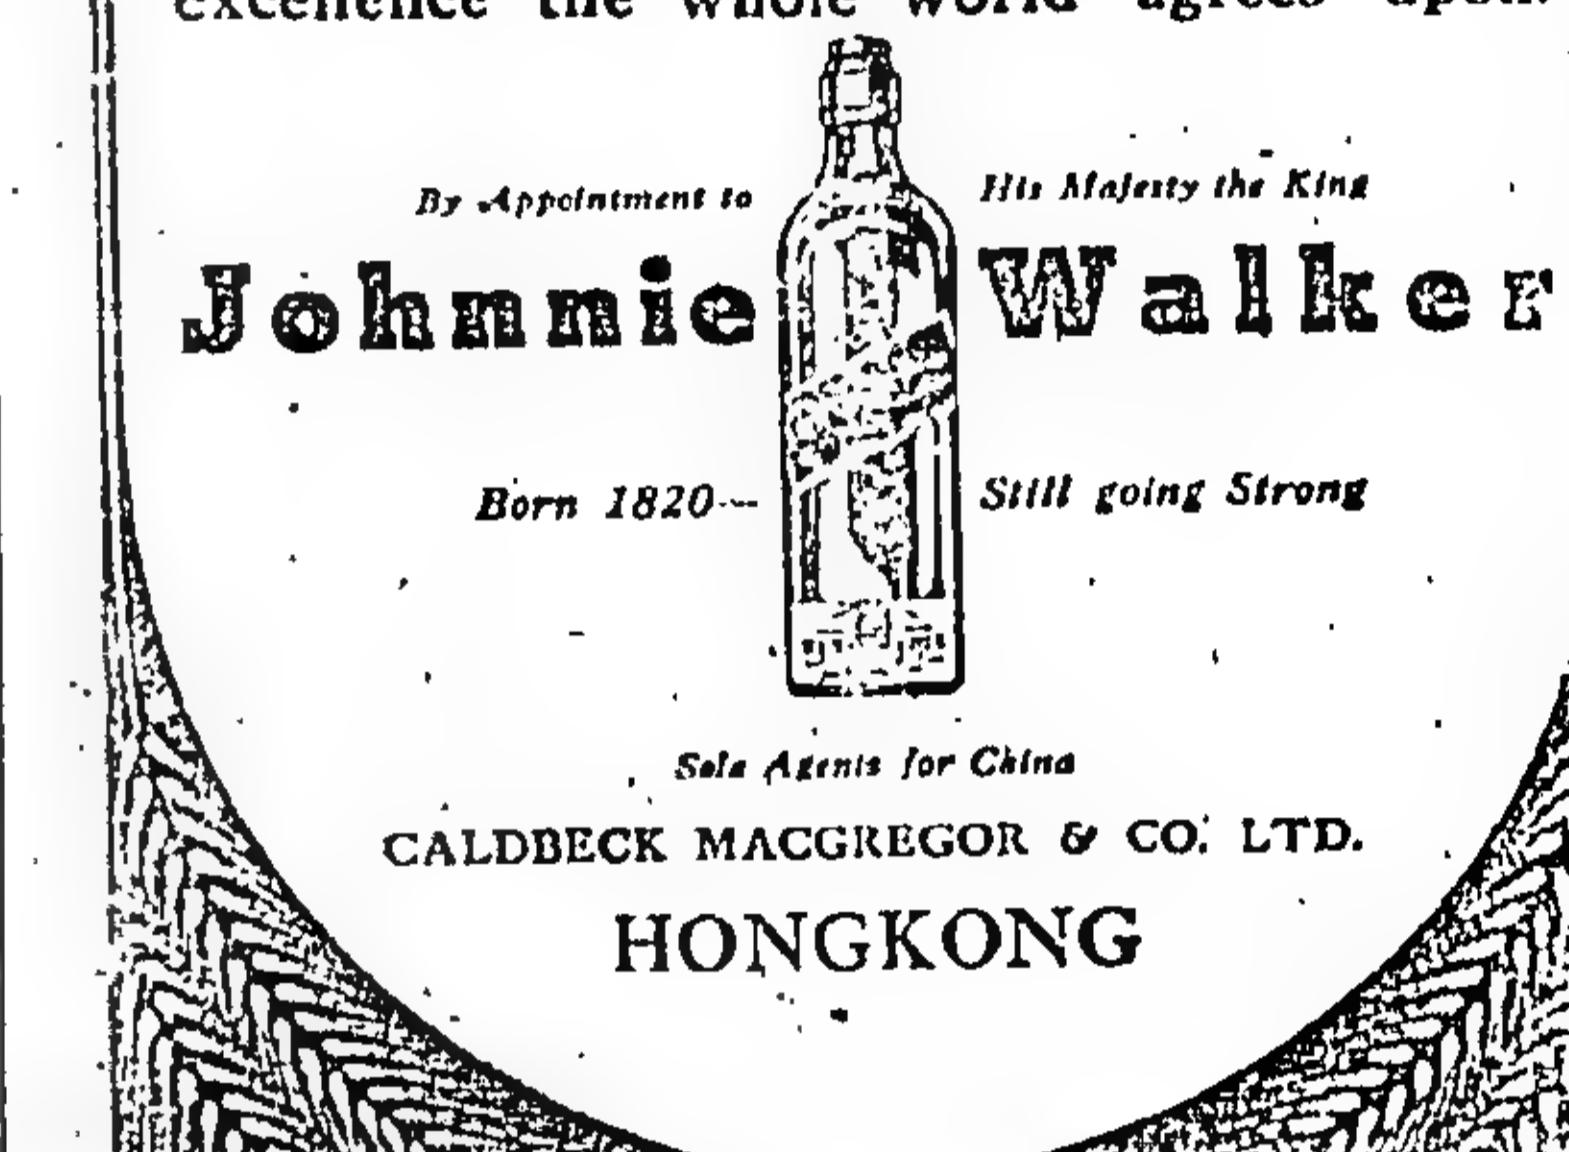

An inquest on a man killed in Middlesex was held in Surrey recently, because through his heart continuing to beat for 16 minutes after death, he was not found to be dead until taken to hospital in Surrey.

A pathologist stated that the man was killed instantly by a blow on the jaw, and explained that it was a case of "instant death" in which the heart went on beating as in judicial hanging.

He said to me: I never call for a whisky—I know better . . . I said to him: Quite right, call for Johnnie Walker—there is no better . . .

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE
MARKET IRREGULAR
YESTERDAY

New York, June 23. Swan, Culbertson & Frits, New York, summary of yesterday's market:—The market to-day was irregular and trading was on the light side. The advance early in the session brought prices to new high levels since April 15. Later, however, moderate profit-taking was encountered which was accompanied by dullness. Finally, prices recovered from their low levels, with support noted all along the line. Individual issues, however, were slow in responding to the rally. Motor shares started, but price movements were narrow. In the bond market, utility rates were higher, but Government bonds were irregularly lower. Stocks on the Curby Exchange were irregularly higher.

S. C. & F., New York office cables: Stocks:—The market to-day reflected profit-taking, but the undertone remained strong. Sears, Roebuck's rates were up 20 per cent. for the month ended June 18th. The Southern Pacific Company has floated $8,000,000 in order to purchase 2,550 freight cars, the largest since 1929. The reduction in dynamic rates is expected to affect the third-quarter earnings of the Hercules Powder Company, as 50 per cent. of the total business of this corporation is done by the explosives department.

The Department of Labour reported a contri-seasonal increase in employment and pay-rolls during May. Business failures during the past week totalled 102, as compared with 172 failures the previous week. Demand deposits totalled $14,431,000,000, against $14,677,000,000 the previous week.

Cotton:—Sentiment continues bullish, but the tendency is to await reactions or for a Government announcement of further sales of "spot" cotton. To-day's selling was largely due to traders taking their profits.

Wheat:—Speculative demand is lighter, but there is no relief in the North-West. Reports of damage to the crops continue and hedges in the Winter crop are beginning. The European crops are favourable, with the possible exception of Russia.

Rubber:—Strike talks are sub-siding, whilst interest is improving. The consumption of rubber in the United States during the first five months of the year reached the record of 230,434 tons.

SENTENCED FOR MANSLAUGHTER

STUDENT GETS THREE MONTHS

Sentence of three months' hard labour was passed by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl McGregor, at the Criminal Sessions this morning on Park Ki-ying, 24-year-old student, who was found guilty by the jury on a charge of manslaughter of Chu San-ling, 48.

The following comprised the jury: Messrs. C. A. Goldenberg (foreman), Kwan Yiu-kwong, So Man-ying, Au Fong-yut, Tung Wing-ki, Ho Que-him and Thong Po-ling.

Appearing for the prosecution, Mr. E. H. Williams, Assistant Attorney-General, said the deceased had apparently borrowed money from the accused and it was during a quarrel over its repayment that he died.

On the morning of May 1 the deceased had been at Shamshui-po arranging to meet his wife and 24-year-old stepson in Shamshui-po Market in the afternoon. The arrangement was carried out and while they were on their way home, the accused approached the deceased and demanded the return of the money, about 40 cents. The deceased said he could not repay as he had no money and asked the accused to wait for a day or two. The accused then suggested that the deceased should go to a clansman of his to have the matter settled. This was agreed to, but on the way the deceased's wife asked her husband not to proceed any further as she was hungry and wanted to go home. This annoyed the accused who adopted a threatening attitude.

TWICE STRUCK

According to the widow and the son, the accused then struck the deceased twice on the left hip. The accused, however, denied having struck the deceased but alleged that he was set upon by the three of them.

After the assault, continued Mr. Williams, the accused ran away. Meanwhile, the deceased had collapsed and was taken to the Kowloon Hospital where he was found to be dead.

The following evening, the accused was seen by the widow and the son who had him arrested by a Chinese constable. The three of them said that when he was being arrested the accused admitted having struck two blows on the deceased. The accused, however, denied having struck the deceased twice on the left hip.

Dr. Y. K. Ng, of the Kowloon Hospital, said there were no signs of violence when the deceased was admitted. He looked for signs of external violence but found none.

Dr. G. H. Henry, medical officer in charge of the Kowloon Hospital, disposed to having performed a post-mortem examination on the deceased. Death was due to haemorrhage, following the rupture of the spleen. Deceased had been suffering from beri-beri and his spleen was enlarged, being about six inches by four in size, whereas a normal one was only three inches by two. The rupture might have been caused by a fall on a projection such as a kerbstone or by a light punch.

The beri-beri also could have eventually caused his death.

ACCUSED'S DENIAL

Chen Kuan, the widow, Chu Lai, the son, and Wong Koon-yung, Constable 6722 who arrested the accused, then gave evidence corroborating what Mr. Williams had said.

In the witness-box, the accused denied having assaulted the deceased, but alleged he was set upon by him, his wife and stepson.

After a retirement of about ten minutes, the jury returned an unanimous verdict of guilty.

Passing sentence, His Lordship said he was taking into consideration the precarious state of the health of the deceased, and the fact that ordinarily such a blow as had been inflicted by the accused would not have caused death. The sentence was to date from the first day of the Sessions.

FUNERAL TAX FORBIDDEN

CANTON AUTHORITIES' PROCLAMATION

Canton, June 24. Kwangtung provincial authorities have issued a proclamation forbidding the imposition of taxes on funerals or on the dead, lying in state, as has been the practice in some districts in the past.

Severe penalties await magistrates or officials levying this form of tax.

overnment and its supporters as by the Labourites.

With regard to oil sanctions, Sir John pointed out that the United States had no power to prohibit exports of oil. He recalled that Mr. Eden had said that Britain would apply its oil sanctions to the neutrals if it protested at the unfairness of treating failure to impose oil sanctions as a crime of the British Government.

The purpose of sanctions ceased when the war was finished, he said.

Britain's Power

Very ridiculous things had been said, Sir John went on. It had been suggested that the British Navy in the Mediterranean would have been overwhelmed in any sanctions war. He did not doubt but that the Navy would have given a very good account of itself, but with the present situation in Europe and the grave dangers surrounding the country, he was not prepared to see a single ship sunk even in a successful battle in the cause of Ethiopia.

Sir Archibald Sinclair, for Opposition Liberals, asserted that throughout the whole crisis the Government had been diverted by fear. The economic power of the League had Italy in its grip, he said, and the Government was throwing away this weapon just when it was becoming effective.

The Government's policy put a premium on successful aggression and made a world safe for dictators.—Reuter.

Sanctions to Go

Brussels, June 23. The Belgian Chamber of Deputies to-day voted for the abolition of anti-Italian sanctions. United Press.

Action Not Condoned

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, the Prime Minister, said it was not the Government's intention to condemn Italy's action.

Britain had no power to lend money to Italy and they had no intention of seeking such powers.

Collective security, he said, had failed because of the reluctance of nearly all the nations of Europe to proceed with military sanctions.

The League's duty now, he said, was to see what it could do in the light of recent experience. British policy, he added, was still based on the League of Nations.

The German Menace

Paris, June 23. At the conclusion of the foreign affairs debate, the Chamber passed a vote of confidence in the Government by a margin of 184 votes on a motion submitted jointly by all groups, the majority of the Chamber approving the Government's declarations and expressing confidence that the Government will defend peace and France in collective security.

M. Delbos, Foreign Minister, had previously further clarified the Government's position when replying to interpellators, whose main theme was the German menace. He said that, rejecting isolation, or old-fashioned alliances, the Government remained faithful to collective security, but was fully conscious of the danger of German dynamism. France remained calm and would accept no equivocation with regard to the violation of the Locarno Pact. Reuter.

Nanking, June 24. The Kuomintang organ, Central Daily News, declares in an editorial to-day that the South-west movement is intolerable.

The South-westerners, under the smokescreen of an alleged withdrawal, have been secretly advancing, says this paper. This constitutes an insurrection, towards which the Central Government has only one choice, namely: a punitive expedition.

The Government's endurance being exhausted, any further forebearing means nothing of responsibility.—United Press.

DANGERS FROM GASOMETERS

QUESTIONS TO BE ASKED TO-DAY

At this afternoon's meeting of the Legislative Council, the Hon. Chau Tien-nan will ask the following questions:

With reference to the Hon. Colonial Secretary's replies to the questions asked by the Hon. Dr. R. H. Kotewall in this Council on the 10th January, 1935. In regard to the explosion of a gasometer at West Point, will the Government state—

(1) Whether it has been finally decided to move the gasometer at West Point to a more suitable site; and, if so, where the site is;

(2) Whether advice of the Home Authorities has been obtained as to whether special legislation for the compulsory inspection of gasometers is desirable here; and

(3) What action does the Government propose to take in regard to gasometers in other parts of the Colony?

EMPIRE SHIPPING

FOUR POINTS FOR COMMITTEE

London, June 23. The President of the Board of Trade, Mr. Runciman, announced in the Commons that the Governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia and New Zealand had asked the Imperial Shipping Committee to report:

Firstly, as to the traffic possibilities of the British passenger and cargo services between Western Canada and Australia and New Zealand;

Secondly, whether a service on the lines suggested by the shipping interests concerned would be appropriate in view of the traffic possibilities and any other shipping facilities available. If not, what kind of service would be appropriate;

Thirdly, as to the probable financial result of such services, taking into account the financial result of existing British services between San Francisco and Australia and New Zealand;

Fourthly, whether such service would have any ill-effect on any other British interest.

Consideration of the matter was begun at a meeting of the Shipping Committee to-day.—British Wireless.

FIRES INTO CROWD

INDIAN POLICEMAN WOUNDS FOKI

A somewhat sensational incident occurred at about eight o'clock this morning in Pottinger Street, near the Central Market, when a newspaper boy was wounded as the result of a shot fired by an Indian constable who became surrounded by a crowd when he arrested a boot-blacker.

P. C. Sahib Singh was on duty at the time when he saw the boot-blacker plying his trade without a licence. He arrested the lad, and a large crowd gathered. The constable fell to the ground, and, being surrounded, he was unable to draw his revolver and fired one round, the bullet hitting Li Fan, aged 21, a Foki of the Keung Shueung Evening News, in the right thigh. The injured man was taken to hospital, while the boot-blacker escaped during the commotion.

Owing to the absence of the fleet, the naval detachment was very small.

Lined up on the crisp turf within the race course facing the enclosures and stands the troops and units presented an imposing spectacle, and despite the variety of their uniforms, the smart manner in which they marched to and occupied their positions, successfully united them into one organization for the purpose of the day.

KING'S BIRTHDAY HAPPY VALLEY REVIEW AND MARCH PAST

The Colony of Hongkong yesterday honoured the forty-second birthday of His Majesty King Edward VIII by a display of military splendour and public loyalty almost unequalled in its history of ninety-five years.

It was the particular wish of His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, that the observances should be of a nature befitting the first birthday celebration of the Monarch since he succeeded six months ago, and the large holiday crowds and members of military and voluntary services gave their whole-hearted support. Ships in harbour dressed overall and banners fluttered from all buildings.

In the morning, His Excellency received the Consular body and drank the health of His Majesty with them. Special permission had been obtained to hold a reception in the evening and over 2,000 guests thronged Government House to be received by His Excellency and Lady Caldecott, who braved a slight indisposition to take her share in the celebration.

A salute of 21 guns was fired by the Mountain Battery, H.K.S.R.A. at noon yesterday signifying the birthday of the King.

Elaborate arrangements had been made by the military authorities to ensure that the precision and smoothness characteristic of British ceremonial should be strictly adhered to on the occasion of the Review. His Excellency the Governor had indicated some weeks before that he desired the Colony to extend itself on this first birthday of the King.

Accompanied by his mounted staff officers, comprising Brigadier H. G. Seth-Smith, M.A., Col. H. C. Harrison, G.S.O.I., Major G. K. Dibb, M.C., R.A., G.S.O. II, the G. O. C. of Aldershot Camp, Lieut. P. J. Howorth, R.A.

The parade was brought to attention while the command was taken by the G.O.C. The General galloped to the ninth end of the review and proceeded slowly down the entire line followed by his staff.

Governor Arrives

The appearance of the Motor Machine Gun section of the Volunteers escorting His Excellency the Governor's car heralded the commencement of the ceremony. The escort and car drove smartly up to the saluting base where His Excellency took up position attended by Commodore C. G. Sedgwick; H.N., Commander C. Wauchope, R.N., Squadron Leader A. K. Dalzell, R.A.F. and the Hon. Mr. T. H. King, I.G.P.

A bugle sounded, a drum beat a short tattoo and sharp voices again brought the parade to the attention. Bayonets flashed in the air and remained motionless while the National Anthem was played. The Union Jack was hauled down, the Royal Standard broken and again "The King" was played.

At the word of command the entire parade then executed the impressive advance in review order, halted, and the Royal Salute was given.

Three cheers called for by the G.O.C. were loudly given, hats being raised in the air as the shouts echoed from end to end of the three hundred yard line.

The Royal Salute was given as the Royal Standard was furled indicating the departure of His Majesty the King from the ceremony. This terminated the birthday observance of the parade and the Governor mounted the saluting base for the March Past. The Royal Navy detachment, headed by the G.O.C., took the lead and marched from north to south in column of route while the massed bands played appropriate marches from their new position close to the flag. The March Past took about half an hour to complete and stretched about two miles in all. The regulars, of course, outshone all by their meticulous style but there were special words of praise for the Indian detachments and the Volunteers, the latter, particularly, giving a very smart display. After the March Past the troops proceeded northwards up the race course and on to the road.

The departure of His Excellency the Governor terminated the Birthday Review.

In Command

The following officers were in command of units on parade:—Lt.-Col. M. Carrington-Sykes, 6th Heavy Brigade, R.A., Anti-Aircraft Brigade, R.A., Fortress R.E., 2nd Bn. Royal Welsh Fusiliers, 2nd Bn. Lancashire Regiment, 1st Bn. Royal Ulster Rifles, 1/10th Punjab Regiment, Royal Army Service Corps, Royal Army Ordnance Corps, Hongkong Mule Corps, Royal Air Force, Hongkong Naval Volunteer Force, Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps, Hongkong Police, St. John Ambulance Brigade.

Behind the parade were drawn up the massed bands of the three army battalions under the command of Bandmaster A. B. Yule, 2nd Bn. East Lancashire Regiment. The Punjab Regiment were privileged to march past their own band.

The Hongkong Police were parading in a Birthday Review for the first time.

Over 4,000 men were assembled on the parade ground by a quarter past five and the enclosures were amply packed with spectators. Among the latter accommodation had been reserved for officers of the Services and Volunteer forces, with their families and friends, members of the Q.A.I.M.N.S., the British Legion, non-commissioned officers and families, Boy Scouts, Girl Guides and school children from the Garrison Schools and Colonial Schools.

Lady Caldecott arrived shortly after 5 o'clock and took seat next to the saluting base, a raised platform encircled with red and blue bunting. On either side a line of spectators occupied chairs and seats.

Colonel A. Burrows, R.A., took charge of the parade until the arrival of His Excellency the G.O.C. Major General A. W. Bartholomew who rode on to the field at 5.15 p.m. accompanied by

Preparations

It is most important that the skin should be cleansed morning and night with CLEANSING CREAM, as this cream dissolves and removes all dust and powder from the skin, it leaves the skin clear and smooth.

To tone the skin pat on ARDEN SKIN TONIC, this is a mild astringent which clears the skin and closes enlarged pores.

Some skins may need a stronger astringent; for that type of skin SPECIAL ASTRINGENT is excellent. It firms loose skin and flabby tissues, braces and lifts drooping muscles.

Now, nourish the skin with ORANGE SKIN FOOD if you have a thin face or lines and wrinkles. This cream is excellent for filling out hollows and removing wrinkles.

If you have a full face then VELVA CREAM is used, as this nourishes the tissues without fattening the skin in any way.

DEATH INQUIRIES

From time to time, the question has cropped up of the desirability of instituting in Hongkong the English system of coroner's inquests so far as sudden deaths, or deaths under suspicious or unnatural circumstances, are concerned. In the early days of the Colony that system was in force, but in 1888 the office of Coroner was abolished; the powers hitherto exercised by that official being delegated to Magistrates, who have since exercised them. Under the Coroners' Abolition Ordinance, it is provided that "whenever any person dies suddenly, or by accident, or by violence, or under suspicious circumstances, or whenever any dead body is found within the Colony, or is brought into the Colony, the Magistrate may, if he considers an inquiry to be necessary, enquire into the cause of death of such person." It is further laid down that the inquiry may be carried out with or without the assistance of a jury. Under the discretion vested in the Magistrate, not a tithe of the cases which come under one or other of the specified groups is the subject of public inquiry in Hongkong. The system at present operated is the Scottish system of magisterial inquiries, and it is to continue. An important variation is, however, to be put into force here, under which in every case where a Magistrate deems an inquiry unnecessary the relevant papers are to be sent to the Attorney General, who will have the power to order one if it appears to him advisable in the public interest. This is a step in the right direction, although there will still be a considerable section of the community who would prefer that the English system be revived in its entirety. The investing of Crown officers with discretion in the matter is not altogether satisfactory, since there is no guarantee of consistency of decision. All cause for differentiation of treatment would be removed once and for all if the English system were brought into full use. Apart from the possibility that the social status of deceased persons might be a fac-

THIS week commenced the monthly Criminal Sessions of this Colony.

In the commonplace and rather dingy building of the Supreme Court, justice is dispensed by impartial men wearing the gowns of legal authority, while throngs of Chinese ignorant of court procedure but obedient to the law under which they have come to live, will whisper in the back benches.

Bare and plain as that building is, it has witnessed remarkable scenes of emotion, retribution and penitence. There is a story gradually clothing its stone walls like the first leaves of a long book which will not be finished until the last sentence of death or imprisonment has been passed and workmen have raised a dust screen over its demolition.

With all their love of imparting the air of ordinary everyday things to the most powerful drama of the courts, the English have made a small concession to the sanctity of this building by the erection of a figure of Justice on its roof. How many have seen it? And yet, for years that graceful symbolic maiden has balanced her scales and gazed with blindfold eyes across a City she will never see.

Inside her walls, the curious can get a tingling of the spine from glancing over the relics of old trials which are kept in the clerk's rooms. Musty labels written in the bold hand of a succession of satellites of Justice, bear brief but eloquent testimony of their "one far fierce hour."

NOTES OF THE DAY

THE BRITISH FILM

A few years ago the British film industry was struggling desperately to survive and grow. During the War Hollywood built up an enormous industry and its productions had become world famous. It seemed as if no other country would be able to compete with the United States of America in the world film market. Then came a change. The development of the sound film was a handicap to American productions. Hollywood lacked essentials—voices. But another factor was introduced, giving British producers a better opportunity to compete in the world market: that was the passing of the Cinematograph Films Act by Parliament in 1927. This Act came into operation on the first of January, 1928, and it will expire on September 30, 1938. Its main purpose was to help the film industry by ensuring that a certain percentage of films shown in Great Britain should be British made.

Statistics show that the quota of British films shown rose from five per cent., in 1928 to twenty-five per cent., in 1935. More British films have been acquired and shown by the cinemas than the minimum required by the Act, and the production of British "feature" films has risen from about thirty in 1927, the year before the Act came into effect, to 189 in 1935. The good effects of the Act have not been confined to the home market. The producing companies have been able to proceed with more ambitious schemes, and the more important British films are now admitted all over the world. What is called the Documentary Film has been developed since the passing of the Cinematograph Films Act, and in the production of such films Great Britain is supreme. As documentary films suffer certain disadvantages under this Act, an effort will be made in 1938 to introduce reforms in their favour.

tor in determining whether an inquiry should or should not be held, there is the further point that openly-conducted investigations might well have a distinct value, by reason of the publicity afforded, in clearing up doubtful points. In some cases, even, such publicity might lead to the detection of criminal acts where the deceased person has met his death in suspicious circumstances. Under existing conditions, the operation of the law leaves a good deal to be desired. We can only hope that, with the change now announced, the position may be placed on a far more satisfactory footing.

Mid-Summer Calendar of Crime

Supreme Court sessions began again on Monday . . . Somebody will be on trial all through this week in the dock where Cheng Kwok-yau and the Haiching pirates were sentenced.

A knife that slew a man, sent stepped the bounds of propriety. Another to the gallows, and most horrible of all is an even now perhaps its unwilling court of law: a malformed pup has not been exonerated, preserved in alcohol. It has not so important as those national scraps but in its small sphere a witness to broken faith or more sordidly, of fraud, theft.

A quill pen, once wielded by where piles on piles of musty Governor when taking the books bear Chinese characters oath of office; beside it a chop written by long dead fokis, per still dully glinting to the clerks and accountants. They are two long queues whose history has been forgotten. They ciers; trusting partners who may have been ripped from were deceived by their fellows. Their owners' heads in frenzied They all finished up before the mutilation; they may merely same bewigged gentleman with represent a prank which over the precise mind and searching questions and had their tales of shame or dishonesty brought into the light of day.

Through the door of the bankruptcy court you can see the raised seat of the Chief Justice, canopied with carved woodwork, set irrevocably apart from the body of the court, occupied by the litigants, their clients and witnesses.

Facing the chair the prisoner stands in the high dock which he enters by a subterranean stairway. Brass rails surmount the woodwork. They are polished frequently where anxious hands have held for support while waiting for jury's verdict and Judge's sentence.

WHILE waiting for the court to begin, the curious have time to ponder on the wires which run overhead the length and breadth of the court. They are there to aid the bad acoustics. Inevitably there is a clock and a calendar. Time is of no importance in the dispensation of the law but Time is the great factor that weighs heavily on each guilty mind.

Counsel sit round the long table between judge and prisoner, police officers rattle their accoutrements as they look to the last minute details, the jury shuffle in their seats and the usher intones "Cou-ou-ourt!" Everybody rises as the judge enters and bows briefly before settling himself in his throne.

The Usher proclaims the opening of sessions, the cases are called, the Chinese interpreter's voice rings over all. To the prisoner in the dock between stalwart warders the interpreter seems the only link between him and a strange world.

To us too, it is a strange world and at that we will leave it. We go out into the bright sunshine and with some relief say farewell to the world presided over by that blind impartial figure of Justice.

G. W. G.

KILL WORRY OR IT WILL KILL YOU

As a remedial step we are apt to overlook the necessity of settling our bodies right before our mental and nervous troubles can be conquered. We may ask advice, we may be persuaded to consult a psycho-analyst or psycho-therapist (mental healer), but we should never fail to see a doctor as well. Indeed, it is a mark of the trustworthy psychological consultant that he inquires about the physical state of his patients before suggesting any treatment.

There are quacks who bring a serious and important profession into disrepute, but they may be known at once if they show no concern as to the body's well-being.

About the non-physical causes of worry we often deceive ourselves, and aggravate the trouble. Overwork is rarely the root explanation. It is astonishing how much work a human being can get through. Think of Bernard Shaw, who can still do sixteen hours a day at the age of 80—and is there a more cheerful person? Lloyd George is another seemingly tireless man. There are not exceptions to a rule, but only to the general practice, which should look on them as models to be emulated.

World never killed anyone, says the old saw. But worry kills many and spoils the lives of multitudes. What is the difference? Work is activity; worry is marking time. When we are faced with a difficulty we must work it out, decide upon a course of action.

When we worry we are not doing anything about the trouble, but letting the needle stay in the groove, so to speak, ratiocinating the same phrase over and over again. That wears the record out in time. We must give the needle a push—the rest of the record may be well worth listening to.

To avoid worry—act! Often that means doing something unpleasant, distasteful, difficult, and even dangerous. But power and confidence grow with use, and the very first time we take a bold step our outlook is magically changed.

Let us face the truth that our worries are frequently due to our refusal to do anything about them. We are timid, we do nothing, we build up a heap of grievances against the world to justify us—but the worry persists.

Remember, fundamentally, that it is a blessing to be alive. The world is not a featherbed; if it were it would be stuffy. But for us all the simple joys of existence are available.

One need not be rich to laugh. Love and sympathy do not belong only to the wealthy, or to physical giants, or to the intellectually brilliant. Within us lies latent the limitless power of the human will to face our destiny gallantly. This is the lesson of psychology as it is of Christian doctrine. It remains true whatever the conditions of life, whatever political system rules us, whatever economic troubles beset us, however science may change the world.

As we realise the power of the human spirit, and increase it with use, worry will disappear; for it is a parasite that cannot grow on the resolute.

THOUSANDS THRILL TO WIMBLEDON SHOCKS

Mrs. Sarah Fabyan and Miss Scriven Are Defeated

FRAULEIN HORN TRIUMPHS

SUSAN NOEL PUTS OUT EX-SOUTH AFRICAN CHAMPION

Wimbledon's sensation-mongers were given two satisfying thrills yesterday. They saw Mrs. Sarah Fabyan, formerly Miss Sarah Palfrey, the "seeded" American Wightman Cup player, ousted from the first round of the women's singles' championship by Fraulein Horn of Germany, and almost immediately afterwards witnessed the fall of Miss Peggy Scriven, an important English "hope".

BEATS BETTY NUTHALL

MISS NANCY LYLE DEFEATED

London, June 23. Miss Dorothy Round, England's favourite for the women's singles title at Wimbledon to-day engaged in a great struggle with Miss Betty Nuthall for right of entering the third round. She finally beat "Our Betty" in straight sets of 9-7, 6-3.

Both players received first round byes and Miss Round's progress has therefore been materially lightened.

Countess de Leyvaldene, formerly the vivacious Senorita D'Alvarez of Spain enjoyed a comfortable passage into the second round at the expense of an English player, Mrs. Kirk.

Businesslike Miss Helen Jacobs chopped her way to a straight sets victory with the loss of one game against Mrs. Cable of Britain, while Miss Jedrzejowska, the Polish champion and recent winner of the London championships at Queen's Club, eliminated another English player in the person of Miss Joan Riddell. Miss Riddell offered gallant opposition.

ONE WON, OTHER LOST

CARERA QUILTS RINGS, BOOKS ZEPPELIN'S BERTH

'I Fight No More; I Farm'

New York, May 29.

Primo Carnera is finished with public life. His gloves, that once won him the world heavy-weight championship, are hung up for good.

The man-mountain is going to spend the rest of his days as a quiet, inoffensive little midget in his native Italy.

He is going to nurse his lost leg, which became paralyzed in the ninth round of his fight with Negro Leroy Hayes in New York last night and caused him to lose on a technical knock-out.

Carnera packed his bags to-day.

NOW FOR PEACE

"I fight no more," he said. "I finish. I am washed up." I thought I come back, but now I know I go for ever. Last night decide me. I want now peace."

KHO AND LUM AT THEIR BEST

Brilliant Itoh

Gordon Lum and Kho Sankie, playing in the first round of the men's doubles at Wimbledon yesterday struck their best form since arriving in Europe two months ago when they beat G. E. Godsell and H. B. Purcell in straight sets of 6-3, 6-4, 6-0.

To accomplish this the Chinese Davis Cuppers played sparkling tennis. They were much too fast and powerful for the opposition who had no counter for some daring volleys and terrific smashes.

E. Itoh, who is playing better now than ever before, figured in an exceptionally fine victory with Cunningham the American, against Leopold de Borman and Jacques Van Den Eynden of Belgium.

Itoh on Monday won his singles in most impressive style while recently in the Oxford v. Cambridge tennis match he won both singles and doubles, being the only Cantab to achieve this distinction.

Against de Borman and Van Den Eynden, Itoh monopolised the court with his masterly volleys, delicate placements and decisive overheads.

It came as no surprise to see W. C. Choy and J. H. Ho another Chinese couple beaten by I. H. Wheateroff and K. C. Gander-Dower. Last year Wheateroff and Gander-Dower ended the biggest upset in the Wimbledon doubles by eliminating Menzel and Hecht on the No. 2 court and recent successes in English spring tournaments have indicated that they will be a menace to the majority of pairs at Wimbledon this year.

The were never extended by Choy and Ho, who were outpaced and for the most part, outclassed.

MISS SCRIVEN SURPRISED

Not less unexpected was the elimination of Miss Margaret Scriven, England's No. 4 ranking player, by Miss Joan Saunders, who has not appeared in the English national ranking list for at least four years.

Miss Saunders accomplished the feat of beating Miss Scriven in three sets, winning the first at 6-4, losing the second at 1-6 and winning the third set and deservedly ran out a winner.

Miss Susan Noel earned a notable triumph in disposing of Mrs. "Bunny" Allister, South Africa's No. 1 ranking player. She did this in straight sets with the loss of four games. Mrs. Allister, who is the South African champion, forehand drive into working order, and Miss Noel was able to dictate the terms throughout.

Miss Kay Stammers had an easy passage against Miss Violet King, another English girl, winning with the loss of three games.

In another second round tie, both players having received first round byes, Miss Jacqueline Goldschmidt of France beat Miss Nancy Lyle, British Wightman Cup player with unexpected ease. Miss Lyle secured three games in the first set and two in the second.

Very Few U.S. Athletes Are 100 Per Cent. American

MOSTLY OF FOREIGN PARENTAGE TENNIS & POLO EXCEPTIONS

New York.

Americans like to boast of their prowess in almost all fields of athletics, yet there are comparatively few athletes who can truly call themselves "one hundred per cent. Americans." A survey of the current sports roster reveals that a good majority of the nation's outstanding athletes are of foreign parentage, and in some cases, of foreign birth.

No sport seems to be an exception to the rule, not even the "typically American" game of baseball.

Although golf is traditionally a sport of the Scots, some of the nation's most skillful golfers happen to be of Italian descent. One of the great golf champions of all time is Gen. Sarazin, whose parents were Italian immigrants. Other golf stars of Italian lineage, one generation removed, include Tony Manero, Johnny Revolta, Tony Penna and Joe Turnea. Many other so-called American golfing aces happen to be born in England or Scotland, including Tommy Armour, former professional golf champion, Harry Cooper, Bobby Cruickshank, one of the sport's leading money prize winners, MacDonald Smith and Charles Lacey.

BOXING COSMOPOLIS

Boxing is monopolized by no particular nation. Virtually every boxer of any consequence was born of either Italian, German, Polish, Slavic, Irish, or Russian parents. Heavyweight champion Tony Canzoneri's Italian; feather-weight champion Freddie Miller's German; Middleweight champion-cum-lightweight Babe Rizzo, Polish; Welterweight champion Harry Rose, Russian.

Other top-flight boxers and their descent include former middleweight champion Tom Yarosz, Polish; former welterweight champion Young Corbett, Italian; former junior heavyweight champion Johnny Indick, Ukrainian; former bantamweight champion Lou Salice, Italian; former flyweight champion Midget Wolgast, Italian; Joe Banovic, Slavic; Charlie Retzlaff, German; Ray Impelettieri, Italian; Patsy Perrone, Italian; Max Marek, Polish; Steve Duda, Hungarian; Steve Halulko, Ukrainian; Eddie Zivic, Croatian and Tony Shuce, Italian.

AMERICA AFTER SWIMMING TITLES

AT THIS YEAR'S OLYMPICS

Los Angeles.

Fred Cady, Olympic diving coach, predicts that America's men swimmers will make Japan hustle to keep its Olympic title in Berlin this summer.

Cady, Olympic diving coach in 1932 and coach at U.S.C. says four men from the Pacific coast will offer the Japanese formidable opposition.

"These four are almost certainties for the team," he said. "The best is Jack Medica, the Washington swimmer who has been capturing all the indoor records and championships in the east. Tops in the 400 and 1,500 metre events, Medica will be of chief value to the American team by specializing in the 400 metres, and one lap on the relay.

"Another is Jimmy Gilhula of Detroit, star of the Pacific coast championship U.S.C. team, who trailed Medica by inches in most of the big meets. He'll seek a berth in the 400 metre and relay events."

FINE HIGH DIVERS

Two high divers, Trojan Frank Jurzak and Johnny Riley, are rated by Cady as among the best in the country. Kurtz placed third in the 1932 Olympics and is national champion. Riley is a former national titleholder.

Cady said that no other coast men can look into the powerful springboard trio of Dick Lutzener, Detroit; Marshall Wayne, Florida, and Al Green, Chicago, with one of the first two also rating a platform diving berth.

Cady wouldn't name any coast men with a chance to place in the 100 metre free-style but said that Art Lindgren and Paul Wolf, of the Hollywood Athletic club and Gilhula, will be strong contenders for 200 metre relay spots.

Six men were named by him to monopolize the breaststroke and back stroke events. In the shortest back stroke race Cady picked Adolf Kiefer of Chicago, Dan Zehr of Northwestern and Taylor Drysdale of Detroit. For the 200 metre breaststroke his selections were Jack Kusley, Michigan; John Higgins, Massachusetts, and Ray Kaye, of Detroit.—United Press.

ONLY TENNIS AND POLO

Track and field is studded with many athletes of foreign extraction, including Eugenio Tassano, javelin thrower who is expected to be on the Olympic team and William Steiner, star marathon runner. Tassano is of Finnish descent, and Steiner is of German descent.

College football, the sport which during the fall season attracts the greatest throngs, also has a good majority of stars whose parents were to be "all-American".—United Press.

CHAPTER II

MICHAEL FELT happy. All signs indicated his arrival in Los Angeles within the scheduled time. He had the girl—he was pretty sure of that. Aunt Charlotte to the contrary. All he needed now was a new suit and cash.

He acquired the suit in a town in Colorado where they had stopped off to give the two women a chance to repair the ravages of motoring in the local beauty parlour. Michael went prospecting in a local men's furnishing store. The proprietor unabashed himself on the strange's willingness. Business was particularly bad because his competitor's next door had acquired sole distributing rights to a certain turtle neck sweater which was the current rage. Michael could not afford his own price if he could not trade to his own shop.

And Michael did, within an hour. Prospective customers for turtle neck sweaters stopped short on their way to make their purchase at the sight of a sandwich man sporting the identical sweater. In rapid succession, a street cleaner, an errand boy and a boot cleaner, all outfitted in the black, passed, all outfitted in the turtle-neck vogue. The lad collapsed for the long neglected store which featured V-neck sweaters as the latest fashion. And Michael walked out with the blessings of the owner and a complete new outfit of clothes.

Paula hardly recognized him when she met him in the street. "It's not really you," she said. "Can't you stay?" Michael pleaded. "Look—couldn't we trade the car for a boat and let me drive you across?" You see—"he looked down at her and smiled. "I've found my objective in life. It's driving you around—any place, anywhere—all the time." A curious expression crossed her face. She shook her head sadly. "Michael, if you knew the sort of person I am you wouldn't say these things."

"But I am saying it." There was a pause, then: "Do you believe in love?" "I think it's here to stay," she said softly.

Michael suddenly clasped her to him in a fierce embrace and kissed her several times.

"From all this," he said when he finally released her, "it's fairly obvious I love you."

A shrill voice called angrily from outside.

"Paula, Paula." It was Aunt Charlotte. As they ran back and got into the car, "What's the idea leaving me alone in the dark? Where are we anyway?"

"Colorado," Paula sang out as they flew over the road. "Plenty of time to get to Los Angeles."

"Plenty of time," Aunt Charlotte managed a smile. "We just can't get there five minutes before the boat leaves." There was a dead silence and then she roused herself again to call to Michael: "I forgot to tell you, young man—you're fired in the morning!" She fell back, instantly asleep.

"I suppose best wishes are in order," Michael said coldly.

Paula looked at him with wretched eyes.

"Michael, I didn't mean—"

"That was fairly obvious—you didn't mean anything. You were just rehearsing. Well, how did I do?"

"Now don't explain everything's all right. I can't tell you whom to marry."

"Michael, it's your life!"

"Michael, you're behaving like a perfect fool."

"I've given up until now but I'm learning things," he said bitterly. "Too bad I have to leave you in the morning because another few days with you and I'd have had a liberal education."

Paula found herself growing angry.

"Now, just a minute. I've got a few things to say—"she began furiously.

"You don't have to tell me anything," he interrupted fiercely. "You don't owe me anything."

"Yes, I owe this," she said deliberately.

"I am getting married—purely for money, lots of money. What do you think of that?"

"I think," he observed quietly, "that you're a smart girl!"

Paula bit her lip but the tears would not be held back. Savagely she dabbed at her eyes.

Rescuers Reach Plane Crashed in Wilds

Great Dam Overflows for First Time

The huge Owyhee Dam, principal feature of the irrigation works on the new Owyhee-Federal reclamation project on the Oregon-Idaho border, filled to overflowing for the first time recently. Second only to Boulder Dam in size, the dam is 405 feet high and creates a storage capacity of 1,120,000 acre feet to irrigate 112,000 acres of land. Begun in 1930, the project is now completed.

FRANCE GUARDS CREDIT

PUNISHMENTS FOR RUMOUR-MONGERS BIG ADVANCE FROM BANK

Paris, June 23. The Senate to-day adopted, by 184 votes to 90, a Bill authorising the Bank of France to advance the Government ten millions of francs.

Two Government Bills have been published. The first provides penalties of from three months' to two years' imprisonment, and fines up to ten thousand francs, for anyone circulating false rumours calculated to shake public confidence in the franc, or inciting the public to withdraw funds from savings banks or to abstain from buying public securities.

The second Bill provides that deliberately inaccurate declarations of holdings abroad will be punished by a fine equaling the value of the holdings concealed. This will apply also to property inherited abroad.

The Bill revising the statutes of the Bank of France provides that the State will be represented on the new General Council by bank officials in the interests of the public debt, while the interests of commerce, industry and agriculture will also be represented. The Bill authorising the advance of ten millions of francs from the Bank of France also authorises the Government to issue a further twelve millions in Treasury Bills.—Reuters.

Mr. M. J. Quist Dies At Home

WORD CABLED TO HONGKONG

Nova was received to-day by the Netherlands Consulate here that the Consul-General, Mr. M. J. Quist, home on leave, had died suddenly. Mr. Quist's home was at Laren.

Mr. Quist was appointed a consular cadet, eleve-consul as the position was then, on 12th March, 1906, and therefore had completed more than 30 years' service. His first appointment was to the Consulate General in London. He did not arrive a stranger, for a time he was in a commercial office there in order to learn business methods and improve his English. He remained in London for two years, then being transferred to Hamburg. Owing to quite unforeseen circumstances, his stay in the Hanse town only lasted a couple of weeks. At a moment's notice he had to leave for Singapore. There his chief was Mr. H. Spakler, now a renter in Paris, perhaps the most brilliant Consul-General the Dutch Government ever had east of Suez. Mr. Quist went home in order to prepare for the vice-consular examination in the early autumn of 1909.

APPOINTED TO HONGKONG
Towards the close of 1910, he was in Shanghai as a vice-consul. In May, 1914, he came to Hongkong in the same position; on the eve of a home leave he was "sent" to Singapore for six months. The war interfering with transportation, he was obliged to travel home via Hongkong, Shanghai, Siberia, Finland, Sweden, Denmark and Germany. In spite of this, however, he reached Holland after five weeks. In 1917, when promoted a consul during home leave, he was first attached to the Dutch Legation in Rio de Janeiro, but it was impossible to proceed there without great delay and as Shanghai wanted a second man who could replace the consul-general during home leave, he was sent back to the East.

In February, 1918, Mr. Quist was sent to Yokohama to take charge of the Vice-Consulate, formerly ably looked after by the Belgian Consul General, Monsieur Bastin and Monsieur Polain, later Chargé d'Affaires in Bangkok for Belgium. He stayed there 2½ years, after which he was promoted Consul in Kobe with consular jurisdiction in the Japanese Empire.

In February, 1923, Mr. Quist was promoted a Consul General and since the beginning of March of that year had been in Hongkong.

R.A.F. CRASH INQUIRY

PLANE LANDED ON LINER'S DECK

London, June 23. Sir Philip Sassoon, Under-Secretary of Air, replying to a question in the House of Commons concerning the forced landing of an R.A.F. trapéze bomber on the deck of the French liner Normandie, stated that in normal circumstances it should not be necessary for aircraft to fly low over shipping during training.

He added that the whole circumstances of this crash were being carefully investigated.

He was unwilling to say more at present, he added.—Reuters Service.

Ottawa, June 23. The Prime Minister, Mr. W. L. Mackenzie King, has announced the appointment of Mr. Herbert Marler to be Minister to the United States.

Mr. Randolph Bruce, former Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, will succeed Mr. Marler as Minister at Tokyo.—United Press.

ITALO-GERMAN CO-OPERATION

COLLABORATION IN AIR OPERATIONS

Rome, June 23. The announcement of an Italo-German commercial agreement which will be signed on Wednesday to-day precipitated predictions of Italo-German aviation collaboration.

It is noteworthy that Italian officials are shortly proceeding to Berlin for discussions which will possibly embrace collaboration between air lines in Europe and South America. However, a full air agreement is believed unlikely for the present.—United Press.

CAPONE STABBED BY FELLOW CONVICT

San Francisco, June 23. Warden Johnston to-day announced that James C. Lucas, of Texas, serving thirty years on Alcatraz Island for bank robbery, had stabbed Al Capone, also incarcerated there, with a pair of scissars.

Lucas struck Capone from behind, inflicting a wound which physicians later said was not serious. Capone whirled on Lucas and felled him with a terrific blow of his fist. The guards intervened at this juncture.

Capone has been taken to the prison hospital.

Lucas was placed in solitary confinement after he had reverted that

CHICAGO PRESSES ST. LOUIS BUT PITTSBURGH DROPS BEHIND

YANKS FALL TO CHICAGO

New York, June 23. Chicago Cubs took another step upwards in the National League standing to-day, beating Boston, but St. Louis, leading the race, kept pace by beating Philadelphia. The Pittsburgh Pirates, in third place, were beaten by New York.

Damareo's homer won Chicago's game. It helped to turn eleven hits into eight runs and Boston's nine were only enough to score six. Each had one error.

Pittsburgh went down before the New York Giants' onslaught, when Terry and Whitehead smacked home runs. But with nine hits and these two homers the Giants could only score three times. Pittsburgh scored two on six hits, and gave away an error.

St. Louis only nosed out Philadelphia by the odd run, three to two, and were lucky to win, for the Phillies had nine hits to their five. These five were well bunched, however. There were no errors.

Hallahan pitched a five hit game for Cincinnati against Brooklyn, and did not allow a score. The Reds hit twelve times and tallied three. Dodgers had one error.

BOSTON WINS

Boston won a hard game from Detroit, seven to six, Foxx and Crohn whoeling out homers for the winners and Sims, hitting two for the Tigers. Both had eleven hits and no errors.

Chicago whipped New York, the leaders, for their second defeat in recent days. The White Sox scored thirteen runs on as many hits, and without a single homer. New York managed four runs on nine blows. The Yankees fell into four errors, and Chicago had two.

Philippines hit a homer to lift Philadelphia Athletics' score to eight on twelve hits, while Cleveland could only make six on the same number, helped by Trost's homer. They divided five errors. Athletics on the light end.

Washington overwhelmed St. Louis ten to five, though each hit twelve times. St. Louis had six errors, which resulted in the Senators romping around the bases. Washington erred twice.—Reuters.

To Plead For His Country

HAILE SELASSIE TO VISIT GENEVA

London, June 23. It is understood that Haile Selassie will probably go to Geneva, and that he may address the League Assembly on behalf of his country.

It is learned that the Emperor's object in asking Mr. Anthony Eden to visit him was to inform him of the attitude which the Ethiopians proposed to adopt at the meeting of the League, where it is likely that it will be argued that Ethiopia is still an independent nation and that all organised resistance is not yet ended.

A strong appeal for further support from other nations is expected to be made.—Reuters Special.
